Panzer Columns Drive Toward Athens

ALLIES ADMIT FALLING BACK TO SHORT LINE

Nazi Troops Reported Within 150 Miles of Greek Capital In Thrust.

HITLER DIRECTS BLITZ

King George Forms Cabinet, Calls For Army to Fight 'To Very End.'

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's rampaging panzer columns were reported less than 150 miles from Athens today, thrusting south along the 60-mile-wide plain of Thessaly in central Greece, as the Allies acknowledged they have fallen back again to a new, shorter defense line.

Apparently the next major stand by the British and Greeks was to be made in the southern mountain barriers guarding the approach to Athens between the Gulf of Corinth and the Aegean port of Lamia.

British middle east headquarters said the British withdrawal was "in conformity with the movement of the Greek army fighting on their left."

Australian and New Zealand troops executed "brilliant" rearguard actions which inflicted a heavy toll on the Germans, the British communique said.

The London radio declared that the new line "is unbroken" and said the German assault was proving so costly that the Nazis had to "throw in still more reinforcements in mechanized units, infantry and aircraft."

Meanwhile, a Havas (French news agency) dispatch from Sofia said the Bulgarian army started this morning to occupy sections of northern Greece and fallen Yugoslavia.

Greece's King George II called on his troops to fight "to the very end" amid Allied reverses which saw the Germans break through northern mountain defenses on the Mt. Olympus-Ioannina front, reportedly capture Larisa and Trikkala, and storm down the flat plain of Thessaly toward historic Thermopylae.

Trikkala is a control point of the railway through central Greece from Salonika to Volos, on the Aegean.

With Hitler himself directing the blitz from a railway car somewhere in the Balkans, the German

Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan arranged to talk over the General Motors situation with President Roosevelt during the day. The CIO united automobile workers served a five-day strike notice last week against the giant corporation which has millions of dollars of defense contracts. The union wants a union shop and higher wages.

Clean-up Starts, But Few In First Ward Co-operate

Today was the first day in Fire Prevention and Clean-up week but L. L. Linham, superintendent of the city's garbage department, believes that few Mansfielders were aware of it.

Starting out early this morning with several trucks and a reinforced crew in anticipation of the collection of rubbish accumulated in Mansfield homes during the past year, Linham reported found only one container.

Clean-up week is being sponsored by the Junior Association of Commerce in conjunction with Fire Prevention week directed by the Kiwanis, Optimist and Rotary clubs. Collection of rubbish is scheduled in the various wards of the city during the coming week.

DRAWS MURDER CHARGE TODAY

Akron Prosecutor Prepares To Accuse Janitor, One-Time Reformatory Inmate.

A first-degree murder charge was to be filed in Akron today against Albert B. Lukens, 58, former Mansfield reformatory inmate, who assertedly confessed cremating the body of pretty Ruth Zwicker, 23-year-old music teacher after she resisted his advances in the church music room.

Reformatory records showed that Lukens, janitor of the North Hill Methodist church, served 10 years in the Mansfield reformatory from 1897 to 1907 for manslaughter in the slaying of Mrs. Julia Stiegler of Cincinnati.

Police said he also was twice taken before the Stark county grand jury for questioning in the slaying of Elizabeth Brown in Canton in 1908. The jury failed to indict and he was returned to the reformatory as a parole violator. He was freed in 1913.

Prosecutor Alva Russell said today he would file the murder charge immediately so the case can be taken before the Summit county grand jury, according to an International News Service dispatch.

After hours of questioning, Inspector Vern Cross said he still was not satisfied with the story told by Lukens, janitor of the North Hill Methodist church.

Red Glow In Sky Attracts Thousands to Fire Scene

Spectacular Blaze Draws Hundreds From Towns In 40-Mile Area; It Was a Field Day For Photographers.

REFLECTED against low-hanging clouds, the ruddy glow of the fire at the Home Materials company lumber yard last night proved a mysterious beacon that attracted hundreds of curious spectators from a 40-mile radius. Not only were thousands of Mansfielders drawn to the scene of the fire, but residents of towns as far away as Marion drove here.

The reddish pall was reported visible in Norwalk, Hayesville, Galion, Willard, Perrysville, and Lodi. And scores of residents came from each of those towns to swell the crowd that milled along the Pennsylvania tracks and thronged East Fifth and Sixth streets.

Fanned by a strong west wind sparks from the fire swept over a wide industrial and residential area in the east part of the city.

Sparks were reported dropping like hail—hot hail on cars at the top of Ashland hill.

LOOT SAFE AT SIMPSON HIGH

Thieves Blast Combination To Get $100; Library Entered, Church Windows Broken.

Thieves, believed by police to be seeking receipts from the Mansfield Relays, broke open a safe in John Simpson Junior high school last night and stole approximately $100 in cash.

The burglary was discovered today at 7 a. m. by Mrs. Bertha Hollinger, matron, when she opened the office of Superintendent W. L. Miller.

Police today were attempting to discover the thieves' means of entrance into the building. Inside, they broke the glass in two doors and released night locks to enter the purchasing agent's office on the first floor, the superintendent's and the board of education's offices on the second

The thieves chiseled out the combination of the safe and then ransacked all the offices, evidently searching for a greater amount than they obtained from the safe. Included in the money taken was $55 of the board's money, about $30 from school cafeteria receipts, $6 from the student aid fund, and several dollars worth of stamps.

Harry E. Mehock, director of the Mansfield Relays, said receipts

REVEALS PLAN

Medical Association Tells U. S. Doctors How to Volunteer.

CHICAGO —(INS)— Details of the plan whereby young American doctors may volunteer for service in British military and civilian hospitals were announced today by the American Medical Association in an editorial prepared for publication in the A. M. A. journal of April 26.

The article pointed out that the 1,000 American volunteers asked for by the British Red Cross to help it meet "an acute shortage" of physicians would not be obligated to enter military or naval service or to take an oath of allegiance to Great Britain. There will be no change in their status as American citizens.

Volunteers accepted by the Royal army medical corps will be commissioned as lieutenants with promotion to captaincies upon renewal of their contracts after 12 months.

The editorial recalled that the new plan, ready for immediate operation, is similar to a World war arrangement between the two countries.

Firemen Work Entire Night to Put Out Flames

Spectacular Fire At Home Materials-Humphryes Lumber Yard Brings Out Huge Crowd; Industrial District Threatened; Trains Delayed.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Mansfield's most spectacular fire in recent years still burned today after an all night battle by the city's fire fighting force against a blaze that swept through two lumber yards in the heart of the manufacturing district.

Bursting forth with all the force of a bomb, the blaze shot from lumber pile to lumber pile and within a few minutes the block-square area owned by the Home Materials company and the Humphryes Manufacturing company was a raging inferno.

Starting in a structure where highly inflammable roofing material was stored, at the northwest corner of the lot between East Fifth and Orange streets and the Pennsylvania railroad and Newman street, the flames, fanned by a high wind, quickly spread across the yard.

Flames shot hundreds of feet in the air and the red glow that hung over the area attracted thousands of Mansfielders and hundreds of spectators from within a radius of 40 miles to the scene.

The Mansfield Telephone company was swamped with "where's the fire?" inquiries and eight additional operators were pressed into service.

Freight and passenger traffic over the Pennsylvania railroad's main line on the west side of the huge yard was jammed with spectators and trains were given "slow speed" orders through the fire area.

Preliminary estimates early today fixed the loss above the $100,000 figure.

Home Materials loss, was estimated by W. S. Ross, vice president as "in excess of $50,000," part of which was covered by insurance.

R. G. Fensch, secretary of Humphryes, said last night that the company stood to lose upward to $50,000 on the materials which went up in smoke.

The Mansfield Telephone company, Western Union and Pennsylvania railroad officials were unable to estimate their losses this morning, but it was believed that damage to lines and equipment might top $25,000.

C. L. Van Derau, manager of manufacturing at Westinghouse, said the company had about two carloads of lumber stored at the yard. He placed a value of $2,500 on the material.

The blaze broke out shortly before 9 p. m. in a building in which the Home Materials company had roofing materials stored.

The tarred paper burned quickly and it was not until the flames touched off an American District Telegraph system alarm at the fire stations that the blaze was discovered.

Witneses said the fire had apparently gotten a head start on the interior of the building before setting off the signal system.

They said the building burst in-

LIFELINE: Blaze Threat To Jobs Of 6,000 Mansfielders

For several hours last night, the city's wage lifeline was in danger.

For the spectacular blaze in the lumber yard of the Home Materials company threatened the plants of Mansfield's largest employer, Westinghouse, and the Humphryes Manufacturiing company.

Had either of those plants caught fire, others in the vicinity would have been in equally grave danger notably Tappan Stove company, about two blocks away from the lumber yard.

At present, Westinghouse employs more than 4,800 persons, Humphryes nearly 600. Tappan and other smaller plants in the vicinity would account for another 600.

If all had been completely shut down due to fire damage—even for a short time—6,000 persons would have been out of work, drawing no pay. Those 6,000 persons represent about 60 per cent of the city's industrial pay roll.

Had such an event transpired, the city's business life would have been dealt a paralyzing blow.

To prevent the fire from spreading to their plants, officials and workmen at both Westinghouse and Humphryes went into action promptly, and stayed on the job until city firemen, battling violently, had brought the stubborn, wind-swept blaze under control.

Humphryes faced the most serious menace. Vital parts of its plant were only across narrow Newman street from the edge of the fire. Live embers, literally thrown by the high wind, fell on Humphryes buildings, and hose lines from the company's own equipment were played on roofs and walls.

Westinghouse, with factory buildings sprawled all over the neighborhood of the fire, organized a corps of roof watchers, to put out the embers as they fell. Westinghouse also had fire lines in readiness, but didn't have to use them.

RATTLE TRAPS: See Need To Replace Fire Department 'Junk'

As a result of last night's fire at the Home Materials company, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton today said city officials are planning to take immediate steps to obtain more adequate fire fighting equipment.

Crafton said the matter will be brought before city council at an early meeting. He expressed the hope that council will set up an early program for obtaining new equipment and added:

"If it takes a bond issue to obtain the necessary money, I believe that the majority of the thousands of people who saw the handicaps firemen were working under, would be for it and vote for its passage."

The blaze from the standpoint of property loss was regrettable, Crafton said, but it did give Mansfielders a chance to see what they have in the way of fire fighting equipment.

"All of it, with the exception of one truck, was down there and anyone who got near some of the equipment, 20 years old or older, and heard the crash and rattle of worn out pumper engines knows just what we are up against," he said.

"Those firemen did a fine job and the praise given them by hundreds in the crowd was certainly warranted.

"They kept the blaze from spreading through the industrial district. When you stop to think what could have happened down there it is almost astounding. Thousands of men would have been put out of work if those flames had spread to those factories."

Mansfield has five fire trucks in the "rattle trap" class, Crafton said. The department's most modern piece of equipment was purchased three years ago. It is a fire pumper truck and the first new one the city has had in 17 years.

Some of the "rattle traps," the director said, are so obsolete that repair parts cannot be obtained from the factory. Needed parts must be obtained from junk heaps.

One of the trucks, was purchased in 1919. It has the body from the first motorized piece of equipment bought by the city in 1916.

RACE ARRANGED FOR SWIMMER AGAINST HORSE

Montana Distance Star Pits Speed In Water Against Horse on Land.

GLENDIVE, Mont.—(U.P.)—Clarence Giles, Montana distance swimmer, now plans to pit his speed and endurance in the water against those of a horse traveling overland—to settle an argument.

Giles, Glendale auctioneer and automobile salesman who managed to smoke cigars while he established a world's distance swimming record two years ago, will race the saddle horse from Miles City, Mont., to Glendive early in June.

Arrangements for the contest were announced by Frank C. Hughes, of Glendive and Squirrel Island, Me., Giles' sponsor.

Hughes said Giles will swim the 154 miles between the towns down the swift-moving Yellowstone river, while the horse and rider will follow the regular highway, taking any short cuts the rider may be able to find. Hughes said plans for the race developed from an argument over the relative endurance speed of a swimmer and a horse.

Giles will race a stallion owned by Ralph Gress and John Oljar, both of Glendive.

The swimming auctioneer attracted attention two years ago with his 288-mile paddle through the icy and turbulent waters of the Yellowstone behind a boat. He traveled the distance, from Billings to Glendive, in 77½ hours.

Last summer a St. Louis butcher, John W. Sigmund, claimed a new world distance record with a 297-mile swim down the Missouri river.

Drexel Institute Gets Famous Dickens Manuscript.

PHILADELPHIA — (U.P.) — The original manuscript of Charles Dickens' last complete novel, "Our Mutual Friend," and the only one outside the South Kensington Museum in England, has been placed on display at the Drexel Institute of Technology.

The manuscript valued at $25,000 and two letters from the author and a daughter were presented to Drexel by the late George W. Childs, Philadelphia newspaper publisher.

The letter from Dickens to Childs invited him to visit at the Dickens home. The other letter was from the author's eldest daughter, Mamie, and sought Childs' aid in obtaining work for her brother, Frank Dickens.

Nazis Buy Up Great Industries of France

Grab 'Legal' Control by Paying French For Big Properties With Their Own Money in 'Friendly' Sales.

PG 15—GERMANS BUY— ..... dg

(Editor's note France is losing its great industries to Germany—and is paying for the privilege via the coolly methodical juggling of German army of occupation costs levied upon the French people. How inexorably the scheme operates is described in the following article, fifth in a series, by Kenneth Downs, ace foreign correspondent for International News Service)

* * * * *

By KENNETH DOWNS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LISBON—In what is unquestionably the largest organized looting project in all history, Germany is taking over a big part of French industry, lock, stock, and barrel.

But the amazing thing about this, the thing that, apart from its magnitude, distinguishes it from booty grabs in the past, is that it is all being done "legally." Germany is paying for its loot—with French francs

Under the terms of the armistice France agreed to pay Germany 400,000,000 francs per day This staggering sum (just under $10,000 000 at the official rate) was levied for the maintenance of the German army of occupation in France.

However, the cost of the upkeep of the army of occupation does not exceed 125,000,000 francs per day. Thus, each and every day the German authorities have 275,000,000 francs clear after paying expenses of the army of occupation

One of the main uses they are making of this great sum is the purchase of French industries. By the end of the war they expect to be in control, with clear legal titles, of French heavy industry, publishing and radio.

All French industry on the continent outside of France is being bought up, including the French interests in Skoda in Czechoslovakia and the fabulous mines De Bor, Europe's richest copper mines, in Yugoslavia Laval concluded the mines De Bor deal with Ribbentrop and Abetz in Paris shortly before he was thrown out of office last December. When Marshal Petain learned of this deal, he is popularly credited with having said·

"M. Laval is selling France piece by piece"

French heavy industry, mostly located in the north, and publishing enterprises also have been purchased on a large scale A large part of the press in the occupied region is either partly or wholly German-owned

The Germans bought into Havas, the great French official news agency and national advertising monopoly, so heavily that the company had to reorganize to avoid falling completely into German hands. Under the reorganization, Havas turned over control of the rich advertising monopoly, but kept control of the news end of the agency.

Hachette's, the big publishing and circulation trust, resisted German efforts to buy it up The Germans were particularly anxious to get control of this company in order to manage the publication of school books.

Since thwarting German efforts to buy in, Hachett's has been the object of the most violent attacks from Paris Soir and other German-owned newspapers in Paris These attacks accuse Hachettes of every known kind of villainy and corruption in the most inflammatory language imaginable The attacks go on day after day.

It would seem to be a rather safe bet that this company, even with its great resources, will have to give up eventually It has no means of defense And the press attacks, if they don't work fast enough, will be followed by official "investigations" and all manner of hamstringing until the company is forced to yield.

The German system has been to close its deals amicably, wherever possible Sometimes they offer prices well above the market. Sometimes, where owners are reluctant to sell to Germans, the latter engage French dummies to do their buying. When these means fail, gentle hints are thrown out· Better sell while you can, or you may have it taken away from you

Thus on Feb. 28, the Paris newspaper Oeuvre published the following announcement:

"As was announced by the minister of finance on Dec. 9, 1940. the board of the Compagnie Francaise des Mines de Bor reminds its stockholders that a German group is about to acquire the stock of the company and will take over administration of the company

"The stock, no matter what category . . . will be purchased at 3 500 francs per share

"The sale of the stock is optional However, the board strongly advises stockholders, with no reservations, to realize on this operation as rapidly as possible"

Nothing strong-arm about that But few will miss the hint

The Vichy government recently put through a law forbidding future sale of French securities to foreigners either in or out of France. If this law is permitted to stand, it will slow down the gobbling up of French industry However, it won't stop the sale of privately owned industry which does not have its stock listed on the market. Much of French heavy industry is so owned. The week the decree was passed, a family-owned Lorraine mill was sold for 80 000,000 francs cash.

Riot of Color Spells Spring In California

BAKERSFIELD Cal —(U P)— It's springtime in California's San Joaquin Valley and spectacular wildflower color displays in rural areas are attracting thousands of visitors

Observers report the flowers are ahead of schedule this year and the peak of the blooming season will be reached two or three weeks before usual.

Poppies, popcorn flowers and Baby Blue Eyes blossom in the Edison, Arvin and Shafter districts. The flowers in those areas are short stemmed but carpet the fields with brilliant colors.

A 300-acre field of California poppies in the Edison district offers a preview of the gorgeous colors which will be seen later when larger stands of long stemmed blossoms mature.

Scattered poppies, lupine and brodiaea are blooming in the Wheeler Ridge-Grapevine area through which the Golden State Highway connecting central and southern California winds

CANADIAN WEST FORCED TO CUT WHEAT ACREAGE

Alberta Farmers Turn To Mixed Farming To Conserve Land.

CALGARY, Alta. —(U P)— Despite the fact that wheat crop prospects for 1941 are the best in history, Alberta farmers today were planning to cut down their wheat acreage this year and devote more of their effort to mixed farming.

This strange paradox is due to the war, which has closed off European outlets for wheat. Agricultural experts predict that the enforced trend to increased mixed farming will be of lasting benefit to Alberta, creating a more stable situation than existed when farmers grew only wheat.

With seeding only six weeks away, the prospects today were that oats and barley would show a big increase In addition, great tracts of former wheat land were expected to be seeded to grass

If these were normal times, Alberta farmers would be looking forward to a record-breaking wheat crop Seeding conditions generally are better than last year—and last year the province produced the largest crop in history

The province has substantial moisture reserves, due to fall rains The moisture carryover is greater than in many years

The situation now is a strange contrast to that of a year ago, when plans were being made to plant a record wheat crop France and the Low Countries had not been over-run, and European outlets, plus war demands, hinted at strong world market

This year, huge amounts of wheat are piled up in Canada, creating a storage problem. Farmers must find something other than wheat as a cash crop. The swing started last year, when half the province's farm income was from livestock, dairying, sugar beets, potatoes, eggs, wool and miscellaneous field crops

Sport Podge

Now that the Mansfield Relays are over we can turn our attention once more to that popular spring pastime of football.

Wednesday afternoon will find Coach Paul Snyder's Tygers of Mansfield High journeying to Coshocton for a workout with "Sky" Wharton's Redskins, and their second practice tilt of the season against outside opposition.

Mansfield owes Marion a spring game, and Snyder had hoped to make the trip to the home of the Presidents Tuesday. When the date fell through he lost no time in booking the Coshocton jaunt.

After the way the Tygers pushed Toledo Waite around last week, the word is rapidly getting out that Mansfield must be reckoned with when the schoolboy scramble for state honors gets under way next fall.

However, lest Tyger supporters become unduly optimistic, it must be pointed out that there are things the team needs to become a high scoring aggregation. Chief among them are: a fast boy who can get out and go after the way has been cleared, and a sharper aerial attack.

As the team stands now, it may run up big scores against its weaker foes, but it can't be expected to wear out the goal line chalk in every tilt.

Coach Jack Mollenkopf of Waite thinks enough of the Tygers to want them for another practice tilt next Sept. 13. And he'll get it if present plans work out, with Mansfield making the trip to Toledo.

Under an Ohio High School Athletic association ruling, schools will not be permitted to play until Sept. 19, but Mollenkopf and Snyder agree that: "we can practice, can't we?"

Yes, it seems they can practice, but they can't charge admission.

Mollenkopf and Snyder now join in a little close harmony:

And so next fall
We'll jump the gun,
We won't make money,
But we'll have fun.

There's another thing the two grid mentors are agreed upon.

Says Mollenkopf to Snyder: "There's one thing you'll have to do next fall — wallop Sandusky."

"That's what we intend to do," declared the Tyger tutor. "Nearly all our boys came out of last year's game with black eyes. And they weren't the result of hard, clean, football."

"Those Sanduskies can't take it," asserted the Waite coach. "Give them a good trimming once and you'll never get back on their schedule.

Massillon's mighty men are still mighty, with the fork and spoon. I wouldn't say anything about the knife. But it was the knife and fork league and the Massillons did all right there. And in that league the Mansfields did all right too.

All of which doesn't make much sense until you understand that I'm talking about Massillon's kegling men who made their third trip of the season to Mansfield yesterday.

The plucking of the pins was all in fun but the putting away of the provisions at Jake Miller's East Side Nite club was in earnest, and no foolin'.

It was a very nice party Jake put on last night, if I may say so. And if all of the Mansfields could meet all of the Massillons under the same conditions, the friendly rivalry between the two towns would be that much more friendly—and that much more rivalry.

BUCKEYE GOLFERS TO TANGLE WITH WOLVES

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State university's golfers, victorious in six of seven matches, tangle here today with Michigan, winners in two of three starts this season. The Bucks' latest victim was Michigan State, 13 to 5. Other Ohio State athletic successes over the week-end indicated an 89-51 upset of Pittsburgh's track team and a 6-3 tennis win over Pitt, both in Pittsburgh, in addition to a 4-2 baseball triumph over Purdue here.

AKRON LACED

AKRON—(AP)—The Canton Terriers of the Mid-Atlantic league gave the Akron Yankees their first lacing in four exhibition games, a 13 to 7 verdict over the week-end.

Giants Spring Surprise

Terry's Timid Men Show Plenty of Early Foot.

By BILL BONI
(AP Sports Writer)

THIS, marking the start of the second week of the major league baseball season, should by rights bring pause for reflection.

In the light of yesterday's developments, however, this corner defies anyone to come up with a reasonable, logical analysis. For those who insist on analysis, however, here is the situation:

In the National league the New York Giants, who were not supposed to make the first division, are in first place, having lost their first game in six starts to Brooklyn yesterday, 10-9.

The Cincinnati Reds, favored to repeat for the pennant, are next to last and attained that eminence only by winning their last two games, including a 7-3 job on the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday.

In the American league, barring the presence of the scorned Boston Red Sox in first place with a record of five wins and no losses, things are not so strange. After all the Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees are figured to run one-two either way you name 'em, and at the moment they're running two-three.

In the National league there were four games yesterday. These produced 62 runs, 100 hits, 16 errors and 27 pitchers, or an average of 15 runs, 25 hits, four errors and seven pitchers each. There were three games in the American league. These turned up 52 runs, 67 hits, 12 errors and 15 pitchers, also an average per game of far too many.

In both leagues there was only one pitcher able to go nine innings. He was the Yankees' Red Ruffing, who gave the Philadelphia Athletics 10 hits but got such studendous support from his mates he could have pitched 'em underhand. The score was 19-5.

The best pitching, however, was a two-man, six-hit job by Mel Harder and Joe Heving, who heaved the Indians to a 4-2 verdict over the Detroit Tigers. The other American league game was won by the Red Sox from the Washington Senators, 14 to 8. It was too cold for St. Louis and Chicago to play.

In the senior circuit things were even better, or worse. The Dodgers and Giants drew a record Polo Grounds crowd of 56,314, and every man got his money's worth, what with five homers, two by Mel Ott; nine pitchers, and the winning run scored from second by Dolph Camilli after the Giants' Babe Young had hit Alex Kampouris in the head while trying to force the Brooklyn infielder at second.

There were at least two homers in each of the other National league games. The Phils got two, but one in the 10th by Babe Dahlgren paid off for the Boston Bees in a 7-5 victory; Linus Frey and Harry Craft hit for the circuit in the Reds' conquest of the Pirates, and the Chicago Cubs needed three to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 11-10, in 10 innings.

Colonels And Birds Do O. K.

Lead Association After First Week of Play.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Although winning five of yesterday's seven games, western clubs in the American Association still were having a tough time of it as the conclusion of the first week-end of heavy firing found all four of them in the second division.

Only Louisville, in first place with four wins and no defeats, and Columbus, second with a 4-and-1 standing, were able to win games for the easterners yesterday. The Colonels took a 4-to-2 decision from Milwaukee, with Charlie Harris getting credit for the win.

Columbus split with Minneapolis, dropping the first tilt 7-to-3, and winning the abbreviated finale—a 6½-inning comedy of errors that lasted nearly three hours, included eight miscues, 29 hits, and ended 16-to-14 in favor of the Birds.

Kansas City, pennant winners last year, showed old-time power in slapping down the Indianapolis Indians twice, 7-to-3 and 8-to-2. The games were the first defeats for the Indians and the first wins for the Blues.

St. Paul also broke into the win column for the first time with a double win over Toledo, 6-to-2 and 5-to-4.

Reds Try To Beat Old Coach

Carry Pennant Chase To Chicago Ball Yard.

CHICAGO —(AP)— The Cincinnati Reds are here today to greet and beat their coach of the last two seasons—Jimmy Wilson whose play as catcher in last fall's series helped put the world title flag on the Crosley Field mast.

Johnny Vander Meer, who looked good but lost against the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday, is the Reds' probable pitcher. Johnny didn't get on the record against the Cubs last season; but his opponent today, Bill Lee, had a 1941 record of one victory against five losses with Cincinnati.

Wilson's won't be the only familiar face among the Cubs as shortstop Billy Myers was also a winter switchover on a deal that brought Jimmy Gleeson and Bobby Mattick to Cincinnati from the Cubs.

Forrest "Dot" Pressnell, Findlay, O., hurler sold by the Reds to the Cubs about four months ago, got credit for the Chicagoans' 11-10 defeat of the Cards in yesterday's 10-inning battle.

Nearly 20,000 fans saw the Reds end their three-game series at Pittsburgh yesterday with their second straight victory. Jim Turner, who pitched five innings and was a part of a three-run Red rally that decided the game in the sixth, got credit for the 7-3 triumph over Joe Bowman who was routed in that same sixth.

Sunday was a big day for little Linus Frey, Reds' second sacker, who poled a homer in the first, followed Werber's triple with a single to bring in the winning run in the sixth, and sent a topped grounder to second in the seventh which allowed two more scores when Frank Gustine threw wild. Frey was also middleman in a pair of double plays.

Harry Craft got his second homer of the season in the ninth and keeps his place at the top of the Reds' regular batters with .455 for 22 times up.

Bob Quinn Heads Syndicate Purchasing Boston Bees

By BILL KING

BOSTON—(AP)—For the second time in his half-century of baseball, Bob Quinn is heading a syndicate-owned club that he hopes will be a pennant-winner.

That esteemed veteran, popularly known as "Honest Bob," proudly announced last night that a dozen loyal friends had joined forces with him to purchase the 73 per cent controlling interests in the Boston National League club held for the past five years by C. F. Adams, Boston sportsman.

Among them were Casey Stengel, the club's manager, and Francis Ouimet, the former national open and amateur golf champion, now a Boston broker.

It is understood that the Quinn group agreed to give $250,000 cash and a $100,000 note for control.

CLEVELAND WINS TITLE

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Wrestlers of the Cleveland Central YMCA again hold the national YMCA team title. The Clevelanders scored 14 points in week-end competition to edge Baltimore by a single point.

27 per cent holdings, former Massachusetts Gov. Frank G. Allen, ex-Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston, and Leopold M. Goulston, the club's vice president, will retain their interests, Quinn revealed.

In addition to providing the means for the purchase of Adams' stock, the group also will supply fresh working capital, Quinn exulted.

Quinn and his group planned to get organized today and he said it could be taken for granted that he would continue as president and Stengel as manager.

The successful completion of Quinn's syndicate plans, lauched five months ago, placed him in the same position he assumed here in 1923 when he and a number of Columbus, O., friends purchased the star-stripped Red Sox from the late Harry Frazee.

For 10 years Quinn dumped his personal fortune into the fruitless task of making those American leaguers something other than a consistent last place club.

When he finally admitted the job was beyond him, he sold out to Tom Yawkey.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Elyria's Rifle club today assumed the crown of Ohio's championship small-bore rifle shooters after cracking out 1,135 of a possible 1,200 score in the annual matches, sponsored by the Ohio Rifle and Pistol association.

Medina, the defending titlist finished second with 1,133, while the Miami club of Cincinnati was third with 1,131.

The Richland Gasco club, of Mansfield, topped the Class B section with 1,107 and the Miami club's number two team grabbed the Class C crown with 1,073.

Medina won the league title match with 1,418 out of a possible 1,500. Dayton was second with 1,411, and Upper Sandusky third with 1,399.

In the prone matches, the Columbus Rifle and Revolver team won with 799 out of 800. Shooting perfect 200's were Helen Jenkins, Clark Evans, and Fred Gierhart, jr. DeWitt Erk scored a 199. Barberton finished second with 797 and Canton was third with 793.

Larry Wilkens, of Medina, paced Ohio in telegraphic matches with Wyoming and California. Wilkens hit 196x200 in the Wyoming match and 390x400 in the California tussle.

Hal Trosky Wields Bludgeon

Mel Harder Wins Spring Game For Indians.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The American league prognosticators placed a heavy burden on Hal Trosky's shoulders in pre-season sizeups of the pennant race. They said if he started slugging again, the Indians would be hard to beat.

The experts are right so far because the big first baseman is hitting and the Redskins are winning.

Hal got two hits and drove in two runs in yesterday's 4 to 2 victory in Detroit to boost his average to .435 and his runs-batted-in total to six. The latter figure means he has plated almost a third of the club's 19 runs.

With the Indians back home today to play St. Louis, Trosky set his sights on the short right-field wall and the Browns nominated Eldon Auker to stop him. Al Milnar was named to pitch for Cleveland.

Aside from Trosky's continued good hitting, the highlight of the rubber-game victory over the Bengals was the fine pitching of Mel Harder. The veteran right-hander with the doubtful arm limited the league champions to four hits in eight innings and fanned four.

Harder didn't have his usual control, giving up six bases on balls. Neither was he afforded good support, Russ Peters making two errors and Jeff Heath and Ray Mack one apiece.

Peters, playing in place of the injured Ken Keltner at third base, committed his miscues in the eighth and they enabled the Tigers to score their first run without benefit of a hit.

The Indians scored two runs in the third on singles by Harder, Rollie Hemsley and Trosky, coupled with Charley Gehringer's error, and added another the next stanza on Gerry Walker's double, a fly and an infield out.

Trosky's single after Roy Weatherly had hit and advanced on an out pushed over the final tally.

The Tribe plays the Browns three games, goes to Chicago for Thursday and Friday tussles, and then returns home to open a 13-day stand.

Forest Hills Goes Low-Brow

Effete Tennis Club Promotes Pro Tourney.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Constant dripping of water wears away stone, the mills of the gods grind slowly, so here in this year of grace, 1941, the West Side Tennis club annouces it will sponsor a tournament for professionals.

High time, if you ask me, which nobody did. The West Side Tennis club, better known to fans as Forest Hills, has taken a step after all these years that logically should lead to an open national championship with the amateurs and professionals fighting it out just as they do in golf.

An open championship should be the greatest attraction tennis has to offer, the gates should pick up and there could be a good piece of cash for the winner if he is a pro and a nice big cup for an amateur if he comes out on top.

Amateur tennis, it seems to me, has always been indifferent to the showmanship that helps make any athletic contest a better spectacle.

There has been plenty of color on amateur tennis courts but it has been furnished voluntarily by the players and not by the tournament committees or the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Helen Wills' eyeshade, big Bill Tilden's bursts of temperament, Alice Marble's jockey cap, Frank Kovacs' antics and Bobby Riggs' cocky walk all have helped draw people to Forest Hills when those stars were amateurs, but the stars were strictly on their own. Nobody thought to give them a proper setting for their acts.

LEADING STOCKS MAKE TREND TO RALLY MARKET

Brokers Believe Balkan War News Already Discounted In New York Mart.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Leading stocks made motions toward a mild rally in today's market although many issues failed to participate.

Getting early support were U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, U. S. Rubber and Boeing.

Bonds and commodities were narrow.

While brokers could find little that was cheering in the war news, some began to express the opinion the British-Greek reverses in the Balkans may have been pretty well discounted marketwise.

Market analysts studied the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said the price-freezing action taken by the government in the face of a widespread wage hoist had proved "disconcerting to the industry."

"Some leading producers," it was added, "indicated that a general increase of $2 a ton would prevent deterioration of their price position as affected by the 10-cent wage boost. Non-integrated producers in some cases declared that their position has been made untenable by the steel price ruling."

VOTE TUESDAY ON BALLOT BILL

Ohio House Considers Measure to Bar Un-American Parties; Senate Waits Action.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Legislation to bar un-American parties from the ballot, an issue debated since the early days of this legislative session, comes up for a vote in the Ohio house of representatives tomorrow.

The senate elections committee, holding a bill to keep the communist party off the ballot, has defered action pending outcome of the house measure.

The house bill would apply to any party advocating overthrow of the government by force, or which was connected with a foreign government.

The Democratic and Republican parties would be exempted from the measure's provisions.

Officials of any party other than the two major ones would be required to file with the secretary of state, six months before an election, an application accompanied by an affidavit declaring it did not engage in un-American activities.

The secretary of state would have to certify, within 60 days, whether the party was entitled to a place on the ballot.

The bill was vigorously opposed by representatives of the communist party, who contended it was unconstitutional.

The house and senate return to work tonight to take up a heavy calendar of business and to strive to clear their desks in time for adjournment by May 2.

RAVENNA—(AP)—A fall into a 40-foot crevice at nearby Nelson Ledges state part was fatal to Donald Wilson, 21, of Cleveland. Four companions with whom he was walking said they suddenly missed Wilson and found him dead upon reaching rocks where he plunged.

Westinghouse Has Enough Coal To Last For 60 Days

The Mansfield Westinghouse plant has only enough coal for the next 60 days, with any replenishment depending on a settlement of the present coal strike, officials of the plant revealed today.

The last car of coal ordered through the regular channels arrived Sunday, it was reported, and the total coal reserve is now in the neighborhood of 2,750 tons, enough to last for two months.

Company officials are hopeful that the coal strike will be settled long before their supply is used up, but said that failure of operators and miners to reach an agreement within that time would force the plant to close.

Other Mansfield plants have not indicated that they faced a serious shortage as yet.

But I'm happy over the quick way Vendol goes to work giving temporary relief from constipation and I feel so good that I owe a debt to this fine medicine," says Mrs. Katherine Turner of Coshocton, Ohio.

SMOKE PLAGUE IN PITTSBURGH DATES TO 1804

St. Louis Curbs Studied In Latest Move To Clear Air Pollution.

PITTSBURGH—(CP)—The Pittsburgh City Council is following an example set 136 years ago by a council when the community was only a borough, by undertaking a study of the problems created by the then smoky atmosphere in the area.

This time, however, the council has found it necessary to travel in a body to another city—St. Louis—to make its study. St. Louis recently reported successful culmination of a drive to eliminate its smoke problem.

Pittsburgh had only 2,500 residents, when, in 1804, its burgess, Gen. Presley Neville, requested George Stevenson, council president, to consider the smoke problem.

There is no record of council taking any action at that time, and by 1826, with the advent of heavy industries to the area, the problem of air pollution had increased greatly.

In recent years, a City Bureau of Smoke Regulation, operating under direction of Dr. H. B. Meller, with the aid of federal funds, had been carrying on research on the smoke problem. That agency, however, was discontinued more than two years ago.

The smoke control problem has again been brought to the fore following a period of winter weather in which "smog"—a concoction of smoke and fog—shrouded Pittsburgh for days at a time. Newspapers, civic groups, business interests, educators and representatives of many community interests have demanded action to "clean up the city."

As a preliminary to action, Mayor Cornelius D. Scully and his entire City Council, went to St. Louis to study the methods employed there to solve the smoke menace.

THEATERS

Benny and Allen.

Jack Benny and Fred Allen continue to pelt each other in the by-now historic radio feud that has been caught by the screen in "Love Thy Neighbor," current attraction at the Ritz. It's all in fun and they are supported in their merry clashing by Mary "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" Martin, Veree Teasdale, Rochester and the Merriel Abbott dancers. Pre-war Russia with its gay restaurants, gallant officers and gypsy music furnishes setting for "False Rapture," the second feature.

Popular Heroine.

"Kitty Foyle," the Ginger Rogers vehicle showing at the Park, unfolds the story of a young working girl from the other side of the tracks and a socialite husband from Philadelphia's Main Line. Marriage, annulment and then one adventure after another fills the picture as "Kitty" seeks happiness. Dennis Morgan and James Craig have the masculine leads and Gladys Cooper is in the cast. "Meet the Missus," another Higgins family story with Ruth Donnelly and Roscoe Karns is the co-attraction.

Swashbuckling Tale.

"Santa Fe Trail," the Errol Flynn-Olivia de Havilland co-starring picture opening at the Majestic Tuesday brings to life some of the most colorful figures of America's history. Dealing with the turbulent days of the era preceding the Civil war the picture presents Flynn as Jeb Stuart, famed cavalry commander; Ronald Reagan as General George Custer, and Raymond Massey as fanatical John Brown. Van Heflin, Katharine Hepburn's leading man last season is also in the picture. Merle Oberon in Sherwood's comedy, "Over the Moon," a technicolor production, shares the bill.

Chaplin Makes Fun.

Charlie Chaplin believes that the world needs laughter. That's the reason he made "The Great Dictator," now showing at the Ohio. No one can take his caricature of a neurotic ranting would-be-conqueror seriously. The only thing an audience can do is laugh. Chaplin speaks for the first time in this production; in monosyllables as a little ghetto barber and then in an undecipherable guttural as the explosive dictator "Hynkel." He is surrounded by a superb cast including Jack Oakie as a rival dictator, Paulette Goddard, Maurice Moscovich, Billy Gilbert and Henry Daniell.

which meant that help could not come until the following day. How long could he stall Karl and Mulford? If they suspected anything, they would make him pay through Joan, his only vulnerable point.

"She's so brave," he thought, holding her close. But she didn't realize the horrors that might be in store for her. She had a childish faith in him that wrung his heart. What if he should fail her after all? What if the message didn't get through? If flying conditions were bad, that would mean another delay. And each moment she was in danger --she and Sybil. Even Thomas would pay if his plan went wrong. Three lives depended upon his judgment.

"What are you thinking about, darling?" Joan asked.

Holding her closer, as though she were something very precious, Paul replied, "I was thinking that I love you now—more than I ever have before."

The next day dawned bright and cold. The sky was ice blue, and the yellow sun held little warmth as it beat down upon the ranch. Joan, Paul and Thomas waited in the living room where a small fire burned, and great shafts of sunshine streamed in at the windows sharply lighting wooden walls and floors. Paul stared out at the other house, from which emerged many figures busily engaged in some mysterious activity.

"I'd like to know what's going on over there," he said.

"Probably just as well you don't know," Thomas told him as he spread out a deck of soiled cards on the table and listlessly arranged them for a game of solitaire.

Joan tried the door but it was locked. She went to Paul's side, put her arm through his and said, "Don't worry, darling. You said last night that you had a plan."

The cards fell from Thomas' hands. "A plan? You mean you know how to get out of this mess? Why didn't you tell me? What is it?"

Paul frowned and Joan knew that he had not intended to tell Thomas.

"I'm sorry," she said.

"It doesn't matter. He may as well know."

Thomas's face was lined with emotions — hope, desperation, a pathetic eagerness and the nervous fear that had been riveted in his heart through the years of servitude to Karl Miller. "Tell me'" he begged.

"Do you remember the radio operator on the ship?"

"Sure. He didn't speak a word of English."

Paul smiled. "He's played his part well. As a matter of fact, he is a government agent just as I am."

Joan was as surprised as Thomas. She remembered the night Paul went to the radio room, not heeding a warning from Thomas, but she had not thought about the incident since.

"From the papers I obtained on the ship," Paul continued, "I guessed where this hideout was. I told Jim—that's the radio man's name—to send a message for help stating our location here. I had to guess the time element—how long we would be in Mazatlan and when we would arrive here. So the message didn't go out until today."

"Then they'll send someone after us?" Thomas asked eagerly.

"Yes. But help can't possibly come before tomorrow."

"Why did you tell him not to send the message until today?" Joan inquired.

"There was no use of their arriving before we did. In that case Karl and Mulford would not have been here either."

"But we're safe," Thomas insisted. "If help is coming, there's nothing more to worry about."

"It isn't as simple as that," Paul said. "Karl may have been suspicious of Jim, in which case that message did not get through. Even if it did, we must stall until tomorrow. There is still time for Mulford and Karl to close up this place and escape, or worse than that, take us with them."

"Don't worry about me, Mr. O'Malley! I won't give it away."

"I know you won't intentionally," Paul said, "but even the hope of escape will change your attitude Karl is clever. Try to keep him from sensing that you are less worried."

"So now we must wait again," Joan said. "It seems to me that we spend all our time waiting."

"If thinks look too bad," Paul told them seriously, "I'll have to make Karl think I am accepting his proposition to turn traitor. That will hold him for awhile."

"But if help didn't come, how would you get out of it?"

"That's something I'd rather not think about! The important thing is to get through this day."

But the day passed peacefully enough. Lunch and dinner had been brought, and now fresh logs were heaped upon the fire as the long shadows of night fell. Darkness came swiftly in the desert.

"If this goes on until tomorrow, we'll be safe," Paul commented.

But Karl Miller had no intention of letting it go on until tomorrow. It was shortly after 8 o'clock when he arrived for his answer. And he seemed to have every confidence that it would be satisfactory to him.

"You have been thinking over my proposal?" he asked Paul.

"I've been thinking about it, yes."

Karl rubbed his hands together. "Good. Then I suppose you are willing to come in with us."

"I haven't decided yet."

Joan and Thomas watched him, knowing that upon this interview depended their safety.

Karl's attitude immediately changed. "I've had enough of this! Make up your mind right now. There are important things to be done. We will not waste any more time, Mr. O'Malley."

"Suppose I do join you?" Paul parried. "Will you assure me of Joan's safety?"

"Safety, yes. But if you want her sent back to San Francisco, you are asking the impossible—for obvious reasons. You are not buying Joan's release; you are merely saving her from . . ."

"What?" Paul broke in.

"Let us stop stalling," Karl said impatiently. "In a few simple words, this is the situation. If you do not give us your assistance and the information you have about your government's activities, Joan and Sybil, too, will be taken to the coast tonight and put aboard a ship which will never land in this country again. Is my meaning clear?"

"All too clear," Paul said. "You leave me no choice but to accept."

Karl bowed slightly. "Congratulations! You have courage, Mr. O'Malley. You also have sense enough to know when you are beaten."

Paul's face was expressionless as he said, "One thing I must be sure of and that is Sybil's immediate release."

Karl laughed. "That is quite simple. She is waiting on the porch now. You see, I anticipated your decision."

"Syb!" Joan cried as the door opened to admit her sister.

Laughing and crying, they were in each other's arms. Joan did not even see Karl and Paul leave.

"Are you all right, darling?" Joan asked eagerly.

"Yes," Sybil said grimly. "I've been worried to death about you though."

They drew chairs close to the fire, disregarding Thomas who was listening curiously to the conversation.

"Let me start at the beginning," Sybil said. "You remember the night I disappeared? I left a note saying that 'something terrible' had happened."

"Yes. I was suspicious of Karl then."

"And you were right! You see, I found out that the beauty shop was a blind. I knew of course that Karl's club must be too. I had always been suspicious of him."

"I know," Joan admitted miserably. "But tell me what happened."

"I decided to go to the police. I was on my way there when some of Karl's men picked me up in their car. I was taken to the airport and then here. I've been here ever since."

"That's what Paul thought," Joan said. "Karl and Mrs. Murdock tried to make it look as though you committed suicide. They put your coat and hat and a letter to you on the Golden Gate bridge. They even fooled the police."

"That must have been why they took my coat and purse away from me!"

"Yes. And Paul wouldn't let me say anything because he was afraid something worse might happen to you."

"Do you mean you continued to work for Karl?" Sybil cried.

"Yes." And suddenly she realized that Sybil did not know Paul's true identity. "You see, Paul is really Paul O'Malley of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He asked me to work with him so that he could track down the leader of the spy ring, who is Mr. Mulford!"

"I know that," Sybil said bitterly. "I haven't been around here for nothing all this time! But what is Paul planning now?"

"He sent a message for help from the ship. It should come tomorrow."

For the first time Thomas spoke. "And if it doesn't come, it's going to be plenty bad for us. These men will stop at nothing."

"Who are you?" Sybil demanded.

Joan explained, adding, "Karl's promised to rescue his wife from a Nazi concentration camp. That's why he's been working for him."

"Karl's influence seems to have touched the lives of a good many people," Sybil said thoughtfully. "Even though I suspected him from the first, I had no idea that his activities were so far-reaching as this!"

"They won't be when Paul gets through with him," Joan said.

"Wait a minute!" Sybil cried, looking into Joan's shining eyes. "Are you in love with Paul?"

"Yes! And we're planning to be married when we get back home."

"There seems to be a lot I don't know," Sybil said. "Let's get caught up, shall we?"

Thomas was listening as intently as if it were his personal concern but neither of the girls objected and Joan felt sorry for him. He had nothing, nobody, to care about. So the three of them sat before the fire smoking and talking, explaining the chain of events that had taken place since the sisters were separated.

Thomas added his bit, telling how he had come from Germany and obtained a job, hoping to save enough to send for his wife. But Karl had put an end to his hopes by telling him that she would be put into a concentration camp. Thomas was sure now that his wife had died. As he talked, Joan was surprised to note that he was a man of more intelligence and education than she had thought. Before Karl Miller had broken his spirit, Thomas undoubtedly was a different person. He was an example of the havoc Karl had wrought in the human soul. Could he continue to dominate and destroy the lives of others? Tomorrow that question would be answered.

Joan and Sybil continued talking long after they had gone to bed. There was a strange excitement in the dark stillness of the desert night. They could hear nothing but Thomas's shuffling about the living room, apparently too restless to sleep.

"He's really pathetic," Sybil said.

"Karl has made him that way. Oh, Syb, when I think what a fool I made of myself over Karl Miller! How could I have been so dumb?"

"You were just inexperienced," Sybil said. "And now that you love Paul, you mustn't think about the past."

Joan wondered what Karl and Paul were doing. What was happening in that other house? "I wonder if he's all right now," she said uneasily.

MANSFIELD'S OUTSTANDING CLEANER

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, APRIL 21, 1941.

History also reverses, and this is the stage at which plowshares must be beaten back into swords.

Yes, the answer is that horn-blowing addicts are licensed to drive, just the same as normal people.

Word has finally drifted through that after the French blew up those Meuse bridges the Nazis built others in half a day—but not by leaning on shovels.

Fire Prevention and Clean-up Week

THIS WEEK'S special activity in Mansfield will be fire prevention and clean-up.

While both of these matters are of year-round concern there is an advantage in choosing one particular week in which to concentrate on them, as is done each spring in this city.

It is a good thing, also, for a number of civic organizations to give special attention to the clean-up movement, as well as to popularize the idea of reducing fire hazards.

During recent years many Mansfielders have developed higher appreciation of an appearance of cleanliness and attractiveness in home surroundings, at least partially because of growing interest and membership in garden clubs, and realization that beautifying processes are applicable in all parts of the city.

Education in methods of eliminating common causes of fires in homes is largely individual and awakening school children to these dangers is probably the best approach that can be made, as it is difficult to correct the careless and slovenly habits of adults, which are responsible for a large percentage of residential fires.

Regular inspection of business blocks is especially important in Mansfield, because of the many old structures in the down-town section from which a destructive blaze might spread through an entire block, or even further, with inadequate fire-fighting facilities to meet such an emergency.

Leadership of the Junior Association of Commerce in the clean-up phase of this week's campaign presents a fine opportunity for this organization to again demonstrate its worthwhileness in the community, and co-operation of Boy Scouts with the experienced inspectors who will look over downtown business places for fire hazards is also commendable.

Democracy Against Brute Force

AN ARGUMENT of isolationists is that this country must solve all its own economic and social problems and achieve perfection in democracy before it tries to co-operate with imperfect democracies in other parts of the world to save their lives and system. An interesting answer to that viewpoint is given by a group of professors at the University of Chicago.

America, they say, cannot cope satisfactorily with social and economic problems in an atmosphere of perpetual danger and constant threat which a Hitler-controlled world would provide for us. According to Prof. Jerome T. Kerwin:

"It is because we are very much aware of our social needs and because we desire to solve them according to our democratic traditions that we are determined to bolster the remaining bulwarks of democracy."

It will be very difficult to turn our energies and wealth from vast defense efforts and devote them to perfecting the practice of our democratic principles while brute force dominates a large part of the world and threatens all of it.

Good Cooking Makes Happy Homes

WHEN thoughts turn to progress of the past half century it may be doubted if there has been any more far-reaching advancement in home conveniences than from the wood-stove cookery of "the gay 90's" to the all-electric kitchen of today.

The All-Electric Cooking School, which opens at the Madison theater tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and continues with forenoon sessions through four days, is more than the commonly accepted version of a "cooking school"—it is a fascinating exposition of American achievement in the vitally essential art of preparing food in wholesome and palatable ways.

Cooking, in one form or another, has been practiced since ancient times, but it remained for people of recent decades to carry the preparation of food far above the primitive methods in vogue for many centuries.

Only within the past few years, in fact, has widespread interest been aroused in the advantages of a balanced diet, the nutritional value of various foods and the important part which properly selected and prepared foods play in combatting disease and maintaining or restoring vigorous health.

A cooking school, such as The News-Journal is sponsoring in Mansfield this week, provides opportunity for homemakers—and girls who will later become homemakers—to add to their present knowledge of ways in which food can be properly and economically prepared, and also learn of the variety and attractiveness possible when entertaining guests.

It would be interesting to know, if the information were available, how many homes have been made happier and how many families have enjoyed better health as a result of interested attendance at cooking schools. Also of lively interest would be a record of divorces in which poor cooking contributed to the allegation of incompatibility.

Prosperous American Workers

AMERICAN labor today is fortunate in comparison with former years. This is very clear when you take steel as an example.

With the recent wage gain of 10 cents an hour in the steel industry, an expert points out, the average hourly pay, which was 65.4 cents in 1929, is now 97 cents. Here is a gain of nearly 50 per cent.

When you consider the cost of living, which is considerably lower now than it was in 1929, the steel worker seems to be nearly two-thirds better off than he was a dozen years ago. That is, if he works for the same number of hours. In general, the working time is shorter now. But even so, the average steel worker is more prosperous as well as more leisurely and the situation is much the same in many other industries.

They are saying that Hitler is sparing Switzerland so as to have a place to which he can flee when the time comes—but there are several other matters to be cared for in the meantime.

The horse may be obsolete but the nightmare goes on.

BUT THE BARN DOOR STILL ISN'T LOCKED

What About the 'Bigness' of TVA?

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—For some fifty years it has been a favorite theory on the part of the liberals and the left wingers that anything too big was bad. Since about the turn of the century Louis D. Brandeis, later to become the patron saint of the "pinks" under Woodrow Wilson and in the first Franklin D. Roosevelt administration, ranked as the leading exopent of this idea.

How big is "too big?"

That has never been definitely stated, but Justice Brandeis, always a master of clear expression, showed that it was not just bigness in the anti-trust sense—bigness which by its size was able to throttle competition. The evil lay primarily in size itself. If a thing was expanded enough, weakness developed.

Administration lost the closeup scrutiny of details, lost its sensitiveness to customer and public reaction. In a corporation it was bad for the customers, for the employes, even for the stockholders. It took on the vice of absentee landlordism. It became impersonal. Irate customers could talk only to underlings powerless to change policy or correct wrongs Bookkeeping magnified expense and replaced intelligence.

President Roosevelt was almost a fan for this theory when he came to Washington in 1933. He even applied it to government building. He joked about the mammoth new commerce building, built by and for Hoover. Since then F. D. R. has approved an even larger building, that for the department of agriculture. He seems to have parted company with the whole theory, or rather to have modified it. As it now stands in the administration lexicon: "Bigness is bad—unless WE run it."

ONE of the criticisms of the electric holding companies—when the death sentence was passed and since—was their size. Systems must be "integrated" and operate only in contiguous territory.

In a recent pronouncement with regard to the Commonwealth and Southern, the S. E. C. insists that the electric systems of Alabama and Georgia, though these states adjoin, are too big to be left in the hands of one company.

Now, let's assume that the whole Brandeis theory, and this view about the Alabama and Georgia companies, is sound. There is much to be said for it, though of course there are also potent arguments against it.

But how about bigness in government operation?

T. V. A. is, or certainly will be, considerably larger than the Alabama and Georgia companies of Commonwealth and Southern put together. The Columbia River development threatens to become fairly obnoxious if size is evil. The Arkansas river setup will stretch from Colorado to Louisiana.

BUT that's only part of the picture. The PRESENT intention of the administration is to have ALL these government electric developments head up through a series of underlings to a bureau in Washington—a bureau that will be subordinate to the secretary of the interior.

The president has told congressmen he wants the Arkansas development to follow that pattern. The bill for Columbia is headed in that direction. No announcement has been made about any change in the T. V. A. setup, but David E. Lilienthal is already suspicious of Ickes' greed for power.

The people of the Northwest apparently don't want that. But no soulless and "public be damned" corporation was ever so unresponsive to individual complaints as a benevolent dictatorship eager to do, not what the people want, but what IT considers best for them!

Now if folks are sore at a corporation, they always have at least one remedy. They can start a movement to have the government do something to that corporation. That can be a nonpolitical movement. Their have been lots of them that succeed.

But when the customers are sore with an electric empire run by remote control from Washington, then what?

Health and Diet

Fads Among Doctors and Patients.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE ALL know that patients are liable to have fads. They go from one doctor to another and from one form of treatment to another, always seeking the sudden magic result, but we do not always realize that doctors are also faddy.

Some people seem to think of them as austere and impossibly learned human beings who arrive at a conclusion after a long process of logic based upon science and are always right, but they can be just as faddy as the patients. Medical friends of mine, who believed, once upon a time, in having the appendix out for any ill, are now giving vitamins by the carload and before long I predict that they will be using small doses of selenium.

Whenever a patient gets cured by a method that is not approved of by the text books of medicine the doctors all say it was due to suggestion. But the cures they accomplish themselves are never due to suggestion—oh no, they are the real thing.

A patient has his back rubbed by a back-rubber and gets cured and the doctor says the cure is due to suggestion, but if the doctor should wash out the patient's stomach and the patient gets cured there is no suggestion about that. Or if he gives him vitamin B1 and he gets well that is not due to suggestion—oh no, that is the real thing.

Real Cures Remain.

What has happened to the fads of other days? What has happened to Coueism. "Every day in every way I am getting better and better"? You used to say that into the mirror. Remember? Are you still doing it? If it was good then why isn't it good now? If it cured you then why won't it still cure you?

The real thing doesn't change. If you had malaria ten years ago you would get quinine for it and it would cure you. If you had malaria today you would still get quinine for it and it would still cure you. There is just as much quinine being taken for malaria now as there was ten years ago. Why isn't there just as much Coueism being practiced now as then?

Fads Come and Go.

Of course it is pretty hard to answer a question like that, but there is no question that fads come and go. Unless there is an organization to keep a fad alive it dies out. Coueism had a strong organization for a while but it lost interest.

It is of course a little cruel of me to remind those of you who were once ardent Coueists that you have forgotten all about it. As a matter of fact it was a form of therapy that is recognized by the medical profession and a very sensible one. It probably did a lot of good. It would do a lot of people good now if they could convince themselves that every day in every way they were getting better and better. There are many people who need just the amount of self-assurance that cure gave them.

FDR Sees 'Obligation' for Convoys Outside War Zones, If Necessary

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—At an earlier private talk with defense advisers the president was a lot more explicit about protecting U. S. merchant ships than he was at his press conference.

In the afternoon he merely told newsmen that safeguarding vessels outside war zones was obligatory under the law. He did not indicate how far the government was prepared to go to provide this protection. At the morning meeting with defense counsellors the president supplied the missing link.

He declared flatly that the government would go the limit in guarding ships carrying lend-lease supplies to the British in Egypt via the Red sea, which a few days before he had removed from the prohibited combat area list. If necessary, armed convoys would be provided, and they would be under orders to defend themselves by whatever measures were deemed advisable.

"It's my duty, my obligation under the law as president to see that our ships are protected," the president explained, in effect. "Freedom of the seas is still a fundamental principle of the United States; no act of congress has voided it. Our ships can go anywhere on the globe outside of proscribed combat zones, and I am required by law to protect them from attack."

He pointed out that there would be no question about supplying such protection against a non-belligerent country like France or Russia, and he couldn't see why the same rule didn't hold true regarding other powers.

"Suppose one of our ships went somewhere in this hemisphere, to Newfoundland, for instance, or to Argentina," he continued. "Wouldn't it be our responsibility to defend it from attack? Certainly, it would. Well, the same applies if the ship goes anywhere else in the world, as long as it stays out of war areas.

"It would be entitled to freedom of the seas, whether its destination happened to be a port in this hemisphere or Egypt. And we intend to see to it that our ships have this freedom of the seas."

Monopolists.

A LOOK MAGAZINE photographer was making a shot of hardworking OPM Priorities Chief Edward Stettinius and Nelson Rockefeller, alert head of the good neighbor bureau, standing by a chart. As they waited, the former U. S. Steel executive bantered genially with his old friend, who once directed Rockefeller Center.

"This chart," said Stettinius, "shows nickel—one of your damn monopolies."

"Owned by U. S. Steel," tossed back Rockefeller with a broad grin.

"Yes," said Stettinius, "and which has offices in Rockefeller Center."

Wall Street War.

THE long threatened attack on the stock exchange and securities laws, enacted in 1934-35 to protect investors, has finally started.

The incident was obscured by war news, but the opening gun of the Wall Street offensive was fired a few days ago by Representative James Wadsworth, able blue-stocking New Yorker, who introduced a bill to scuttle the regulatory measures.

One of Wadsworth's proposals would restore to pool operators freedom to rig markets as they did in the lush Twenties. Another would again allow officials and directors of corporations to use inside information to trade in the stocks of their own companies. This is one of the major SEC reforms, enacted by congress for the express purpose of preventing directors from voting a dividend and keeping it secret until they loaded up with stock to make a quick killing.

Wadsworth claims that he formulated his proposals on the basis of replies to a poll he conducted among business men. Until revealed several months ago by The Washington Merry-Go-Round, the contents of this questionnaire was a closely guarded secret. One of its features was the promise that the name and business connections of those responding would not be disclosed.

White House Visitors.

THE president's genial personal bodyguard, Tom Qualters, came to the east entrance of the White House the other day and was unable to get in. He couldn't even get near the door.

Springtime tourists were packed around the entrance ten deep and Qualters had to go around to another entrance.

The private residence of the president is a public museum. Throngs crowd in by the thousands every day, oldsters, youngsters, sweethearts, newlyweds—to see what once was known officially as the "President's Palace."

The tourist figures are almost incredible. When the president and Mrs. Roosevelt hold a reception, the guests occasionally run over a thousand. But the sightseers number as many as 16,000 a day.

The day after Easter, the figure was 16,134, and next day 16,452. Since the White House is open only from 10 to 2, this means a crowd going through at the rate of 4,000 an hour. Of the sightseers, about one-third had letters from members of congress, permitting them to see the entire first floor. Others, with no credentials, are shown only the ground floor and the great state ballroom in the east wing.

At the end of the second day, a group of women, who had asked for more attention than usual, approached a White House policeman as they were going out. "Oh, just one thing more, officer," said one. "What place IS this?"

Merry-Go-Round.

IN AN ARTICLE in tomorrow's American Mercury, Major Alexander P. de Seversky, famous aviation builder and pilot, challenges Colonel Lindbergh as a competent judge of British and German planes. Seversky asserts that Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic did not miraculously transform him into an "authority on military tactics and strategy, the design and manufacture of planes, the organization of air power, or other matters which he has since then so freely discussed." . . . Word in senate circles is that before publication, Colonel Lindbergh sent a copy of his magazine article attacking the president's anti-Axis policies to isolationist leaders Wheeler and Nye for their suggestions. . . . Judge Mark W. Norman, OPM official and law partner of former Attorney General Homer Cummings, never refuses to see a caller. "If a visitor has no busiess seeing me, I can ease him out myself," Norman tells his secretary. . . . Alabama Representatives Joe Starnes and Sam Hobbs have ambitions to succeed Senator John Bankhead, brother of the late speaker, who they believe does not plan to run against next year.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Defense didoes:

Selective service headquarters has just received one of its most irate letters. It's from a Class 1-A selectee who is due for the hop to camp any minute now. He is fuming because his draft board refuses to consider his collie dog a dependent. There is no man with whom he can leave the dog, he says, and he can't take him along

* * *

WHAT the loudspeaker (more properly referred to as the public address system) has done to the army would give an old-time top sergeant the screaming meemies. For instance, if someday you are going to murder the bugler, you'll have to catch him in bed. Why? Because today, that's where the bugler does his "You-can't-get-'em-up." Here's how: The bugler is awakened by his alarm. He reaches under the bed, turns it off, picks up his bugle, pulls a funnel-shaped mike to the end of the bugle and softly blows reveille. From loud speakers all over the camp, his notes blare the bad news that it's time to get up. Not only that, but regimental commanders (colonels) traveling in "jeeps" (reconaissance cars) have P. A. system engineers along with them. When they want to bawl out an order, they whisper it into a microphone and a big fellow echoes across the parade ground.

THERE are no statistics obtainable on how many selectees have been trying to dodge the draft by having teeth pulled — but it must be considerable, because the army has just put teeth into its regulations about men who try to work the old dental dodge. The new ruling is that men who appear at induction centers without the required number of molars, but did have them when they were selected, are now to be given the open passport to a year's training.

* * *

WASHINGTON newspapermen are confirmed pessimists, but it nearly always is just verbal . . . which is no explanation why several in the better-bracket salary range in recent weeks have obtained reserve commissions in the Army or Navy and any day now may be shifting over to jobs which pay only half to a fifth of their present remuneration.

* * *

PVT. Nathaniel Arlington Platt, of Camp Upton, N. Y., has got his name in the army reports. It seems that Private Platt—former farm youth—gets up at 4 o'clock every morning and spends the three hours before breakfast tramping around the countryside "to get a little exercise."

THE new army has everything. On the dossier of Glenn B. Robbins, who is in the air corps in California, is written opposite profession: "Circus owner." Glenn inherited the three-ring circus which was built up years and years ago by his grandfather. The inheritance came after his induction into the air corps. Now he asks: "Just what does one do with a circus?"

* * *

THE army claimed that it got 15,000 applications for jobs as hostesses of the training camps. A congressman, who asked that his name not be used, told me the other day that he got 15,000 letters from women in his state asking that he help them get jobs as hostesses.

* * *

ARMY physicals are strange things. Chuck Fenske, the great miler, practically walked into training—but Joe Rice, the distance record holder, couldn't make the grade Four days before he was turned down (he had a double hernia, doctors said) he ran through two miles faster than any man had ever run them before in this world.

* * *

AROUND Army headquarters they are telling the story about the Fairbanks, Alaska, detachment that went out in search of bad weather. They took a train and guns, footgear, tents and things they wanted to test, and went north of Anchorage in search for sub-zero weather. For days the weather was so mild you couldn't test an ear-muff. The 90 officers and men finally gave up: started for home. On the train on the way back, they ran into one of the worst blizzards in years and were delayed for hours while train crews cleared the tracks of smokestack-high drifts.

A Farmer's Diary

Box of Trees

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THREE WEEKS ago I ordered fruit trees from a nursery company that has been in business more than a century. Some 20 years ago I dealt with the same firm, in planting two small orchards. Their goods were as represented, and both orchards did fine. On the very day we expected the shipment to arrive, we received a card from the village station agent that our trees were there.

Next morning I hurried in, only to find the long rectangular box too big to haul out on my car. The nearby elevator company, observing my predicament, kindly hauled the unwieldy box out on their pick-up truck, with their compliments. We unloaded it beside the pond.

My wife and I, and the three younger boys, pondered well the contents of this wood bound case, supported by six bands of stretched wire. It seemed more wonderful than the far famed box Pandora had—and its contents far more cheerful.

Within those walls were packed marvelous living things that inquiring minds had taken more than a hundred years to produce. Living organisms within whose veins is blended the best breeding of several continents. Amazing creations of the plant world that Luther Burbank by his rare genius and insight has produced during the best years of his long life. All that the federal and local research experts have been able to discover in the way of something new and better.

Here are the implements of peace and better living. Those men who pursued the cause of producing fruit of higher quality, finer flavor and hardier stamina have done something for humanity. They have beaten the hostile tragic swords of a great nation into plowshares and pruning hooks. They have made it possible that many man may not live by bread alone. And it has required the struggle of many that only a few may succeed.

Within that box are the aching anxious hearts of those who worked long years and seemed to fail. Those who struggled early, and bore the withering heat of midday. Those who ran a valiant race and did not reach the goal. Mighty, unselfish dreams have arisen from their graves and are abroad within that precious box.

Sweet April wind blew from the south. Buds were swelling on the nearby apple tree. The bluebird warbled from the hill and the cock pheasant called from the meadow thicket, as we paused a moment and pondered beside the box of trees.

ALLIES ADMIT FALLING BACK TO SHORT LINE

Nazi Troops Reported Within 150 Miles of Greek Capital In Thrust.

high command asserted that Nazi mechanized forces were driving south "far beyond Larisa" in pursuit of retreating British and Greek troops.

A Greek communique, however, declared that the new Allied line was holding doggedly under violent assault, and that nowhere had the Germans knifed through.

"Other German forces advancing across the Pindus mountains to the west took a mile-high pass near Metsovon, 40 miles northwest of Trikkala," the Nazi high command said.

"In Albania, Italian troops in a further advance reached the Greek border at many points."

Italian press dispatches said "a big battle to wipe out the Greek army" was raging at Perati bridge, which spans the Viosa river at the Greek-Albanian frontier.

Italian dive-bombers were said to have destroyed the bridge, trapping the Greeks on the Albanian side; but the Greeks declared that they had stemmed Fascist attacks in the west.

The Germans asserted that British troops were retreating toward harbors in southern Greece, and Nazi dispatches from the front again spoke of "a second Dunkerque"—a reference to the British-French withdrawal from the battle of Flanders last summer.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, declared jubilantly that the Greek army was losing "four-fifths of its permanent forces and all the war material supplied by Britain."

The news agency said that the Greek route of defeat, on the road from Ioannina to Arta, 35 miles south, was littered with the wreckage of hundreds of motor vehicles . . . and that "entire encampments have been thrown into confusion, masses of troops scattered, and supply services destroyed."

On the North African front, Premier Mussolini's high command reported that Italian and German troops halted a British attempt to land reinforcements near Bardia, Libya, 10 miles from the Egyptian border, and that they had captured all British soldiers who "succeeded in setting foot ashore."

This was an apparent attempt by the British to reinforce their columns battling to stem the Axis drive across Egypt toward the Suez canal.

Fascist officials also asserted that the Duke D'Aosta, Italian commander in East Africa, had rejected a British demand for unconditional surrender of his army to insure protection of the Italian population.

In Greece, the Allies acknowledged that the situation was "serious."

London newspapers openly discussed the possibility of a complete withdrawal of British Expeditionary Forces from the Aegean kingdom, and talk centered on the arrival of British troops in Iraq as indicating that the next big stage of the war may be a struggle for the Suez Canal and the rich oil fields of the middle east.

Hitler's "real aim," it was said, was to trap the British Mediterranean fleet, destroy Britain's middle east armies and possibly storm Gibraltar in an attempt to win new ports in Spain and Africa to fight the battle of the Atlantic.

The London Evening News warned bluntly:

"Our troops may be compelled to break off the battle (in Greece) against hopeless odds."

British military sources described the withdrawal on the eastern flank as orderly, maintaining an unbroken front; but the Germans said the Greek campaign was entering its final phase with fighting developing into a hot chase of the British and Greeks south of captured Larisa.

Volos, through which some of the British expeditionary forces entered Greece, is 30 miles south of Larisa, across coastal plains, and the pass of Thermopylae is just beyond the key road junction town of Lamia, 50 miles south of Larisa.

King George II of Greece, who stepped into the dual role of monarch and premier yesterday, formed a new cabinet with himself at its head and Admiral Alexander Skellariou as vice premier, and urged his forces to fight "to the very end."

The cabinet leadership change was forced by the death of Premier Alexandros Korizis, announced to have killed himself last Friday.

Across the Mediterranean, a British garrison still held out under bombing and tank attacks at the Libyan port of Tobruk and advance patrol fighting swirled around the Egyptian frontier town of Salum as the British said their forces were holding out to gain valuable time needed to bring up reinforcements.

In the air war of the west, the Germans said residential districts were bombed last night by some RAF forces which penetrated the western frontier of the reich and the British reported few casualties and little damage from scattered raids over London.

The United States and Canada linked their mobilization of resources closer in an agreement announced last night after a meeting of President Roosevelt and Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King at Hyde Park.

The agreement called for interchange of defense articles by the United States and Canada—with each providing those it is best equipped to produce — for the dual purpose of speeding up aid to Britain and of hastening western hemisphere defense preparations.

Crack Safe At Simpson Junior High

Superintendent W. L. Miller points to the damaged safe in his office at John Simpson Junior high school which thieves broke open last night to take more than $100 in cash. W. C. from the relays had been deposited in the bank.

E. C. Fuller, of the police identification bureau, took tests for fingerprints in all offices entered. Files and the contents of desks were scattered about the floor.

Burglars also broke into the Public Labrary last night but only found a small amount of cash. Entry was made by breaking a window.

Police are also investigating the breaking of three windows in the Mayflower church on Buckingham street. Early last month, a search was made for persons who threw large stones through a window in the church. Saturday night, a police cruiser was detailed to the church where vandals were reported throwing rocks through windows. No estimate could be made of the damage, church officials said, until experts in stained glass window work could inspect the windows.

BELL CLAPPERS TRAVEL AGAIN

College Pranksters Take Them From Tower at Ada.

CLEVELAND—Word went out to officials of Ohio Northern university today that their oft-missing bell clappers were in Cleveland this time.

The two giant clappers, each weighing 50 pounds, were found wrapped in newspapers in the lobby of a newspaper building. Attached was an anonymous letter to the editor explaining that they were taken from the university tower by jokers.

The excursion from Ada to Cleveland is the sixth tour for the clappers since 1885.

DROWNS IN LAKE

ST. MARYS —(INS)— James Wilson, 25, of Franklin, was drowned in Lake St. Marys when rough water caused the boat in which he and William D. Rowland, 42, were riding to upset. Rowland clung to the overturned craft for eight hours before it drifted to shore.

Deputy Sheriff Dwight Baudenbush said two boatloads of fishermen were stranded on an island by the high waves.

FACING DOUBLE LABOR PROBLEM

Officials Beset By Threat of Steel Strike, Deadlock In Soft Coal Talks.

that if a strike is called against General Motors no defense work will be struck.

Charles Beckman, president of the Cleveland local, said 93 per cent of an estimated 1,800 General Motors workers there had authorized national officers to call a walkout.

Steel circles already were beginning to feel the pinch of a coal shortage which resulted when CIO's United Mine Workers of America failed to reach a contract agreement with southern mine operators. Northern operators agreed to a $1 a day raise, but the southerners balked at a demand that they also pay $7 a day, eliminating a 40 cents a day differential in their favor.

An appeal by Secretary Perkins Saturday for resumption of work tomorrow met no favor with any of the interested parties.

The United Mine workers replied that they were willing to resume negotiations with the southern operators in New York. The southerners insisted that they had definitely withdrawn from the Appalachian wage conference which included northern operators, but reiterated willingness to negotiate separately. They renewed last night an offer to reopen the mines with an 11 per cent wage increase.

There was speculation that in view of the contretemps Secretary Perkins might certify the dispute to the national defense mediation board. However, UMW President John L. Lewis already had stated that the union wanted no part of any negotiation supervised by the board.

This situation raised the hopes of house supporters of a bill by Representative Vinson (D Ga.) providing for a compulsory "cooling off" period before workers could call strikes in defense industries.

There was a possibility that the house might take that bill up this week. However, the war department has expressed opposition and it was considered likely that the senate would concur if the house passed the bill.

KIDNAPED

Woman Says She Was Abducted By Former Husband.

GEORGETOWN —(INS)— Freda Martin, 29-year-old nurse, explained her failure to report for duty at a Cincinnati hospital Saturday with the statement that she had been kidnaped at the point of a gun by William Shelton, her ex-husband, who forced her to ride with him as far as Batesville, Ind., whence she hitch-hiked her way to her parents' home in Georgetown.

where the charred human remains identified as those of Miss Zwicker were found in the furnace.

Lukens assertedly told of approaching the girl as she practiced on the piano in the church's music room the day before Easter. In the scuffle which followed, she fell and struck her head against the stool, according to the alleged confession.

The janitor then carried the unconscious body to the basement and dumped it on the coal pile. Early Easter morning, he returned to the church, found the body still there, and shoved it into the blazing furnace.

"I thought she was dead," Lukens was quoted as saying.

A week-long search, in which Lukens led police around the church and even to the furnace room, was climaxed when charred bone fragments and human teeth were found as detectives sifted the ashes in the basements. The girl's father identified the dental work as that of his daughter.

LUTHER LEAGUE CONVENES AT GALION SUNDAY

170 Young People From Area Have All Day Session at Lutheran Church.

GALION—Climaxing an afternoon and evening session of the Luther Leagues of the New Washington local conference at Peace Lutheran church in Galion, Sunday, Rev. H. E. Koch, Columbus, executive director of the National Luther League, addressed both the young people and members of the congregation during the regular evening service hour. His subject was "Soldiers of Christ, Arise!"

More than 170 young people of Luther leagues at Ashland, Bucyrus, Chatfield, Crestline, McZena, New Washington, Willard and Sulphur Springs, were in attendance.

At the close of the evening service, moving pictures of the national convention at Greeley, Col., were shown. Two leagues that tied in the attendance record at the rally were the Martin Luther league of Bucyrus and St. Paul's league of Sulphur Springs.

The rally opened at 3 p. m. following a brief business meeting for delegates. The opening devotional service was in charge of Rev. G. C. Heffelfinger of Willard. Various phases of Luther League work was depicted when skits were presented.

Sulphur Springs league presented the first skit, with Bernice Scharrenberger as discussion leader; Laura Erf of Willard was the leader following the skit by the Willard league; and Pauline Green of Chatfield was the discussion leader following a skit by the Chatfield league. The skits were followed with a talk about the summer Luther League Bible camp given by H. J. Hildebrand of Bucyrus.

A banquet was served by the host league. A program was also presented by the local league and consisted of group singing led by Mrs. Charles Prim, with Dorothy Plack at the piano. The toastmaster was Rev. Philip E. Auer, pastor of Peace Lutheran church of Galion. Annabelle Chapman gave a reading, and Virginia Tracht played accordion numbers. Rev. Charles Lange of Crestline, was the banquet speaker.

Officers of the conference are: president, Amelia Voegel of Willard; vice president, William Schaaf of Attica; secretary, Doris Green of Chatfield; treasurer, Katherine Hildebrand of Bucyrus. Rev. Karl Mohrhoff of Sulphur Springs and Rev. Lange of Crestline are pastor advisors.

As Firemen Battled Stubborn Lumber Yard Blaze

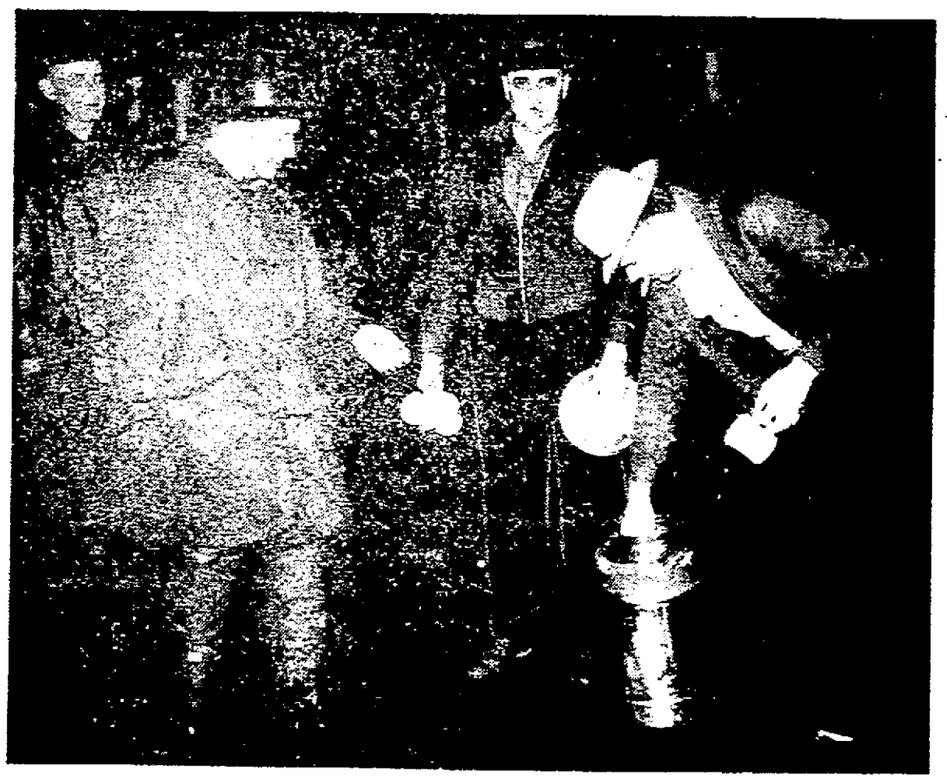
You still have to eat even though you're fighting a fire. Here, one of the city firemen drinks a cup of steaming coffee, while taking a spell from his job at the nozzle of a hose line.

This is what the fire looked like about two hours after it had broken out. Although the stacks of lumber are still burning furiously, the intensity of the blaze is less than as shown in the earlier picture, on Page One of today's paper.

Three boys find a rail on the Pennsylvania lines a pretty fair box seat at the fire. The one in the center points at the camera, which has diverted his attention for a moment.

Getting sandwiches ready for fire fighters. Robert Hayes, right, manager of the Westinghouse cafeteria, and two volunteer workers hurry things along.

Here is part of the huge crowd that encircled last night's lumber yard blaze. Some perched on box cars along the Pennsylvania tracks, and hundreds of others overflowed onto the tracks.



Coffee coming up! Fire Captain Leo Salzgaber, extreme right, and Paul Young, get drinks from volunteer workers. Municipal Court Clerk Ralph A. Hughes, center, and Harvey Bailey.

The corner where the fire apparently started—in a building in the northwest corner of the lumber yard, where roofing materials were stored. Firemen here throw a line of water on the blaze.

Pennsylvania railroad employes check damage done to control box of line's signal system, put out of service by the fire, prepare to get things in operation again by daylight.

Mattress Bees New Rural Fad Over Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The quilting bee, legendary corn huskings of a bygone age have given way to "mattress making" in rural Arkansas.

Several years ago the matrons of rural neighborhoods gathered around quilting frames to do their "visiting" and exchange the latest bit of chitchat. Today the basic idea is the same, but instead of making quilts, the women are turning out mattresses, and, incidentally, helping to use up some of the South's cotton surplus.

The [illegible] were launched by the Agricultural Extension Service and the Works Progress administration with a double objective—to improve the quality of bedding in rural homes and to dispose of more cotton.

Rural women took to the idea immediately and from one county to another the projects spread until now they are operating all over the state. A half-dozen women can turn out from three to four mattresses a day, allowing for the time that their needles are idle while the latest gossip is being passed around.

LUMBER YARD FIRE LOSS SET AT $100,000

Firemen Work All Night In Fighting Fire Threatening Industrial District.

to flames all at once, spreading rapidly to the tinder-dry piles of building materials.

The alarm was sounded at 8:59 p. m. Fire companies Nos. 1, 2 and 4 responded.

The blaze was beyond control when firemen arrived and a general alarm was immediately sounded, calling out all available fire fighting apparatus in the city.

Firemen off duty were called by Fire Chief Charles Seeburger.

All police were ordered out and under the direction of Police Cheaf Meade K. Bates barricaded streets to stem the tide of traffic that poured into the area.

Fire zones were roped off and officers were stationed to keep back the crowds that pushed close to flaming utility poles and sagging telephone and electric lines.

Firemen, handicapped by the intense heat, worked for nearly three hours to bring the blaze under control Eight streams of water were played on the burning timber as nearly 6,000 feet of hose, practically all that the fire department has, was put into service

Flames burned through telegraph cables along the railroad right-of-way and poles carrying the road's telephones circuits toppled, knocking both systems out of service.

Seeburger said this morning he had not yet been able to determine cause of the fire. He suggested however, the possibility of a live spark from a passing locomotive or defective electric wiring in the building may have been the cause.

On the job all night he said he had not yet had time to start his investigation

Power lines in the vicinity were cut by Ohio Public Service company workmen and the city's fire and police signal system was put out of commission.

Sparks rose high in the air and dropped on buildings and residences throughout the northeast section of the city creating additional hazards

Workmen at the Humphryes and Westinghouse plants stood by to guard against spread of the fire and residents in the immediate vicinity got out garden hose to protect their homes.

At Humphryes, workmen manned company hose lines and played streams of water on the roof of storage buildings adjacent to the new $100,000 office structure on the east side of Newman street.

Flames came dangerously close to the new $80,000 boiler plant recently completed, and for a time firemen poured water on the building to protect it from the heat

The string of empty freight cars on a siding at the north end of the lumber yard protected the Home Materials office against fire at the outset.

A railroad crew was dispatched and removed all but two of the cars on the double track. They had to give up the job when the cars caught fire. Both cars were damaged considerably.

Firemen said the blaze was sweeping along the entire north side of the yard sheds when they arrived.

Companies Nos 1, 2 and 4 were at the scene almost simultaneously.

They attached hose lines to hydrants in front of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company on Orange street, at Newman and Orange street, and at two hydrants on East Fifth street in front of the Humphryes office building.

Absence of hydrants on Newman street between Orange and East Fifth streets necessitated the laying of extremely long lines to the fire

Water pressure was maintained throughout the night, principally due to the recently constructed high capacity main from Woodland reservoir to the industrial district

The city's entire fire fighting personnel of 32 men was on duty.

Shortly after midnight, 10 men were relieved when the wind had died down sufficiently to eliminate any serious hazard to nearby buildings

A crew of 22 firemen was on duty until 7 a. m. when another crew of 10 was relieved by those who had gone off duty at midnight. Some were still pouring water on the smouldering embers this afternoon.

Firemen from Central company said they could see the flames shooting above surrounding buildings before they arrived on the scene.

"We could see the blaze while driving down North Walnut street," said Capt Paul Young.

"When we arrived companies No. 2 and 4 were already laying hose. The lumber was all ablaze from the railroad to Newman street. The wind whipped across the place and it burned like tinder."

Capt. Young said he immediately sensed the danger to the buildings on the east side of Newman street catching fire because of the stiff wind and turned in a general alarm

All of the 19 firemen off duty were summoned by telephone, and all the city's firemen and police were on duty by 9:30 p. m

Felix Cisla, night watchman at Humphryes, reported that he observed the blaze about 9 p m. while making his rounds. He hurried across the street to investigate

"I saw a red glare coming from the vicinity of the Home Materials office. I ran over and saw the sheds on fire. By the time I got back to the office the whole northwest corner was ablaze," Cisla related.

W. S. Ross, vice president and treasurer of the Home Materials company said he was attracted to the scene by the "red glare" which hung over the city.

He said the structure in which the fire was believed to have started housed roofing materials. He could not account for cause of the blaze.

Manning the roofs of six buildings at Westinghouse, 20 company police and 40 firemen stood guard against spread of the flames.

Called to duty shortly after 9 p. m. by Walter H Ziegler, chief of Westinghouse police, the men extinguished sparks carried by the wind from the blazing piles of lumber in the adjacent yard.

Police and firemen were stationed on all Westinghouse buildings.

Ziegler said he summoned the men as soon as he was notified of the fire and that they experienced little difficulty in protecting the buildings.

In the company cafeteria, Robert R Hayes, manager, went on the job at 10 p. m. With the aid of 14 volunteer helpers, both men and women, Hayes said approximately 500 sandwiches were prepared within 20 minutes for city and company police and firemen

Steaming coffee was carried in big milk cans along with sandwiches and doughnuts to the firefighters.

Hayes and his workers stayed on the job until 5 a m when the regular cafeteria staff came on duty

All of the fast eastbound Pennsylvania passenger trains due through Mansfield from 9 to 10 30 p m were delayed at the Union station because of the fire, two of them leaving the city more than an hour late

The Liberty Limited, which does not regularly stop in Mansfield, and the Red Arrow, two of the line's crack trains, were held up an hour or more. James E Young, Pennsylvania passenger agent, said

The Broadway Limited and the General were delayed a few minutes until the tracks were cleared of spectators and then went on past the fire under slow orders. At one time, four trains were waiting to get past the blaze.

Young said the principal danger to trains was from the intense heat east of the tracks which might have broken the windows in coaches if the wind had blown the flames toward the passing trains.

Division officials of the railroad said 44 telegraph lines controlling the block system were damaged or completely out of service, slowing down traffic through the Mansfield area

Local telegraph service was interrupted for approximately an hour during the peak of the fire when flames burned off the sidearms on poles west of the lumber yard.

Western Union telegraph officials said the break in service did not hamper communication to points outside the city and lines were patched quickly to restore service in the city areas.

R. D Iden, distribution superintendent for the Ohio Public Service company, said power lines escaped with minor damage since there were no major circuits in that part of the city.

C. L. Lisle, equipment superintendent of the Mansfield Telephone company, reported that one cable controlling more than 75 phones in the fire area and several of the company's poles were burned by the fire.

Lisle said that telephone workers were unable to get near the blaze last night and that repair work was started this morning He estimated that approximately $2 000 damage was caused

Residents east of the railroad on Orange and Wayne streets also were without telephone service

Lisle said that it would be difficult to estimate the number of calls made in inquiries about the fire because the dial system handled a great number Eight extra operators were called in for duty until midnight. Lisle estimated that approximately 15,000 calls were handled per hour.

FATALLY BURNED

CINCINNATI—(INS)—When a plumber's furnace exploded and showered her with flaming gasoline, Mrs. Minnie Marshall, 55, was fatally burned.

Mansfielder Makes Striking Fire Picture

This unusual photograph of last night's lumber yard fire was made by William Hallam, 174 Park avenue west shortly after the blaze broke out. He was one of the first on the scene, and shot his picture from the Pennsylvania right of way.

Even passengers on trains got out their cameras as they learned of the fire when trainmen got "slow signals" at the Erie crossing tower at the east yards of the Pennsylvania line in the city.

They crowded the observation platforms to take pictures as the trains crept past the site of the blaze.

A total of 17 passenger and eight freight trains traversed the Pennsylvania tracks beside the flaming Home Materials company yard from the time the fire started until midnight, railway officials said

City police threw up barriers on East Fifth street routing vehicle traffic away from the fire area.

On Newman street officers moved the crowd of spectators back from the bridge over the Rocky Fork creek to permit fire equipment to be moved in and to protect watchers from electric lines which had fallen onto the street.

News-Journal staff members took over the reception room at the Westinghouse police lodge as a temporary "city desk" to cover the fire. Westinghouse officials provided chairs, a desk and even coffee and sandwiches. Reporters and cameramen made it their headquarters as they went about the task of covering the blaze.

Enrollees from the Rocky Fork CCC camp who were in the city for their usual Sunday night visit joined in helping to battle the blaze and keep spectators away from danger spots. Camp officials said it wasn't necessary to send the boys to the fire

A number of residents of the west side of the city thought the red glow in the sky was the forerunner of a tornado, since the wind was so strong and the clouds earlier in the evening appeared ominous.

A Lexington woman learned of the fire in Lexington before the officers in the sheriff's department knew about it She called Deputy John Whitcomb to ask the exact location of it, and when he told here he knew of no fire, she was so insistent that he investigated and soon found she was right.

It probably was the first time in a long time that all of the early evening East Pennsylvania trains stopped in Mansfield. At one time two of the fliers, which had been held up at the Union station, passed the fire side by side, traveling under slow orders

LICENSE TAGS GO SCIENTIFIC

Michigan's 1941 Plates Are Designed To Reduce Wind Resistance.

LANSING, Mich. —(U.P.)— Michigan's 1941 automobile license plates are the most scientifically designed the state has ever issued, according to Secretary of State Harry F. Kelly.

Last year Kelly admitted embarrassment and some bewilderment when University of Michigan scientists wrote him that the 1940 plates were so large and offered so much wind resistance that they would cost Michigan motorists millions of dollars in gas consumption.

"I never realized license plates were such a scientific problem," Kelly said. "But this year it's going to be different. We have tested 44 types of plates for visibility at night, at high speeds, in storms and during sunny and cloudy periods of the day," he said.

Exhaustive reports were prepared on all phases of license plate design by engineers and traffic experts, Kelly said, and a meeting of automotive engineers, safety groups and law enforcement officers was called at the General Motors proving grounds at Milford, Mich., for a final test.

Problems discussed included how to guard against mud and dust; how to deflect the sun's rays; the size, shape, coloring and lettering; and grouping of numerals.

"We even tested the reaction of color blind persons," Kelly said.

Experts Start Work on Giant Tax Bill

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself:

I see by the papers where one of my fellow columnists has successfully agitated for the passage of a bill in the assembly making it unlawful for a theater owner to bar a newspaper columnist from any theater.

The bill says "theater owners," and it says "anyone over 21 years of age," but it means the Shuberts and it means, among others, me. Because I am one of the newspaper columnists barred by the Shuberts for something I wrote.

I do not receive the news of the passage of this bill with any hat-tossing or dancing in the streets. I regard it merely as another step in the process of Taking the Fun Out of the Newspaper Business.

My scribbling friend took me to task in print (and with some inaccuracy) because I was not in favor of the bill, and he pointed out in the same breath, or paragraph, that a great many very classy columnists crusaded for the bill in the name of civil liberties, freedom, and I don't know what all.

". . . all the N. Y. columnists supported the bill—except Miss Dorothy Kilgallen, who denounced it . . . Miss Kilgallen subsequently was barred from seeing Shubert shows."

This was where a double inaccuracy (understandable, I suppose, in the heat of the crusade) crept in.

1—I did not "denounce" the bill. I just giggled politely at it.

2—I was not "subsequently" barred. I had been barred for a good long time before I ever discussed the bill, which was why I thought I was eminently qualified to discuss it.

When I say the bill is another step toward taking the fun out of the newspaper business, I am talking out of sentiment for a profession I love, possibly because I have had what some of my column-writing colleagues have not had: A reporter's background.

A columnist who came from the legal profession or the footlights or the gents' furnishings business could not be expected to remember what I do after eight years of reporting: Namely, that there used to be romance in the newspaper business.

It used to be a careless, exciting profession—one in which you picked up the telephone and called the city desk at 8 a. m. and you did not know from then on whether the next 24 hours would find you covering a murder, a beauty pageant, a strike, a movie star, a riot, a prize fight or a presidential conference.

That made it fun.

From what the boys in the city room tell me, it is not like that anymore.

The game has rules now. The boys tell me they are only allowed to work so many hours, and then they have to leave the story to a reporter on a new shift, whether it is hot or not.

There is no sitting around the police station chinning with the lieutenant while they grill the prisoner into a confession around dawn; there are no more "death watches"; no more working around the clock on a story that your professional pride wouldn't have allowed you to leave if you were dropping in your tracks.

Of course, we used to beef when we had to work that hard. But we loved it.

But even now a columnist can work as late as he pleases. He has the privilege of chinning until all hours with whacky characters.

Until now he might even have the whimsical privilege of being barred by the Shuberts. That used to be something of a small distinction; it proved, if it did not prove another thing, that at least you were read by two persons other than your mother: Jake and Lee.

The way the Shuberts barred me from their theaters was especially delightful because what I had written that they objected to was so incontrovertibly true. I wrote something to the effect that Simone Simon would not come into New York with the show "Three After Three." Lee didn't like it. From that day to this I have not seen a Shubert show, or a show that the Shuberts had a "piece" of.

Of course, you will remember Simone Simon, didn't come into New York with "Three After Three"; in fact, when it came in, it came in under another title entirely, and folded as I recall, very rapidly.

The accuracy of my prediction did not mitigate the wrath of the Shuberts. But that's what I like about the Shuberts. They are so unmitigated.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—"Men of Boys Town." Screenplay by James Kevin McGuinness. Directed by Norman Taurog. Principals: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Bobs Watson, Larry Nunn, Darryl Hickman, Henry O'Neill, Mary Nash, Lee J. Cobb.

They shouldn't do this to us, but we'll all enjoy a wonderful cry just the same.

Here Father Flanagan and his boys are faced with brimming cups of trouble. There are two major problems in the picture: the first, ever present, is financial—Father Flanagan is always taking in more boys than funds permit, is now faced with the loss of Boys Town. The second deals with cruel, criminal-making so-called "reformatories."

The story opens with Father Flanagan's rescue of one victim of that system (Nunn) and Boys Town's efforts to reclaim him. When Whitey (Rooney) is adopted by a wealthy couple in the town "a thousand miles away" where the reformatory is located, we get close-up views of the institution's methods. Whitey, through trying to help a child toughie who has escaped (Hickman), is himself incarcerated. What you see there makes you believe Father Flanagan's plea for "250 Boys Towns" is too modest—there should be a thousand or more.

No news is Tracy's inspired, quiet and human interpretation of the priest; real news is Rooney's Whitey, a performance devoid of Rooney-mugging except in one comedy sequence where it is deliberate and effective.

"The Lady From Cheyenne." Screenplay by Warren Duff and Kathryn Scola from story by Jonathan Finn and Thereka Oaks. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Principals: Loretta Young, Robert Preston, Edward Arnold, Frank Craven, Gladys George, Jessie Ralph, Stanley Fields, Willie Best.

In the Wyoming territory women got the vote many decades before their sisters elsewhere. This engaging tale tells how its makers "prefer to believe" it happened.

Prim schoolmarm Loretta, disgusted with lawlessness as it is permitted under male rule, undertakes to "clean up" her town by besieging the legislature in Cheyenne. She finds that votes-for-women is a laughing matter to that body, and can't get anywhere until, with the aid of a dance-hall biddy (George), she discovers the feminine approach.

It's a different turn to the western film, and it's a different Loretta it presents.

Chatter Corner

(Just jottings about people you know, as they're seen here and there about town.)

Bryan Styert, clerk of selective service Board 2, trying to get along temporarily without a secretary and busier than the proverbial bee answering questions. . . . "Skippy" is a fox terror and "Mitzi" a Boston bull.

Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton sleepy-eyed after a night at the big Home Materials fire. . . . City Auditor Paul Kelley waxing enthusiastically over the Cleveland Indians' win yesterday. . . . Deputy Municipal Clerk Isabel Gerstmeyer handling fines from the Monday morning rush of traffic violators. . . . Employes in the water and sewer department chuckling over an especially good joke.

Black standing in front of his office on Mulberry watching a dispute between a truck driver and a passenger car owner concerning a dinged fender. . . . REPORT HUGHES TO LEAVE HIGH COURT IN JUNE Washington Hears Chief Justice Responds to Plea of Wife For Retirement.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes will retire from the supreme court at the close of the present term in June, an authoritative source predicted today.

The chief justice, who celebrated his 79th birthday 10 days ago, is described as at last ready to seek retirement, after many false rumors, because of the insistence of his wife that they spend their remaining days in quiet solitude away from official life. The chief justice and Mrs. Hughes, who has been ailing for months, have been married more than 52 years.

The inner circle of President Roosevelt's advisers, anticipating the chief justice's retirement, are booming Attorney General Robert Jackson, of New York, as his successor. Jackson is being supported for the post by Harry L. Hopkins, the president's closest intimate, associate supreme court justice Felix Frankfurter, who advises Mr. Roosevelt on many appointments, and Secretary of Interior Harold Eckes, among others.

Other high New Dealers however, are advocating the promotion of Associate Justice Harlan F. Stone, of New York, a Coolidge appointee and the court's senior justice in years of service, who has staunchly supported the constitutionality of New Deal legislation ever since Mr. Roosevelt came into power.

The Stone adherents urge his promotion and Jackson's appointment to the associate vacancy, thereby created. Friends of Stone intimate he will retire in a few years—he is now 68—and that Jackson can then be named to the chief justice post.

If the chief justice does retire, it will give Mr. Roosevelt the opportunity to make his seventh appointment to the high court. He already has named five associate justices—Black, Reed, Frankfurter, Douglas and Murphy—and has a pending appointment to make to fill the vacancy caused by the recent retirement of Associate Justice James Clark McReynolds. Sen. James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, is expected to get the McReynolds post.

The president's inner circle advisers, meanwhile, are anticipating Jackson's appointment to the court—either as chief justice or associate justice—and are supporting Solicitor General Francis Biddle of Pennsylvania, to head the department of Justice.

FOREST FIRES RAGING OVER AREAS IN 6 EASTERN STATES

Forest fires burning over thousands of acres and leaving hundreds homeless still were menaces in six eastern states today.

Forest service officials said the danger would remain so long as the eastern seaboard's unseasonal dry spell continues. Forecasters held no hope for rain in New Jersey where the destruction was greatest. Other blackened areas were in New York state, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Two deaths and 13 minor casualties were attributed indirectly to the fires. George Knight of Centralia, W. Va., was killed while working with a fire-fighting crew at the Braxton county game refuge. Vsezolod Glazoff, 52, a former Russian army officer, died of a heart attack induced by excitement over a fire at his home in Lakewood, N. J.

New Jersey officials said the fires yesterday, racing along carpets of dry leaves in the timberlands, were the most disastrous in the state's history. They counted 45 outbreaks which destroyed 22,000 acres of prime woodland.

West Virginia had 150 fires, New York state 15 and Pennsylvania 21. In Maryland, flames swept along the eastern shore in Wicomico county. There were other, smaller fires south of Baltimore and elsewhere in the state.

Several homes were destroyed by a wind-driven fire which for a time endangered barracks at Fort Devens, Massachusetts.

Another army post, Fort Dix, N. J., was in the center of the fire area. Four thousand soldiers beat out the flames and aided in the evacuation of civilians from a newly-acquired tract to be made a part of the military reservation.

Harvey Todd, Mansfield Senior high music pupil, got a double thrill out of his trip to the Cleveland opera Saturday. Young Todd appeared in one of the scenes of "Rigoletto" and he caused Lawrence Tibbett, the great Metropolitan star to miss one of his cues. Dressed in a suit of armor, Todd's job was to operate the thunder machine. The way he did it was so interesting to Tibbett that he almost forgot to go on stage in one of the scenes. Young Todd attended the opera with the Mansfield Crescendo club and got a job as a helper through his uncle, John Grabler. The youth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Todd, 357 Marion avenue.

Members of the editorial department of The News-Journal spent an exciting few minutes this morning when a bat made its appearance and soared back and forth across the offices while staff members swung at it with newspapers and coats, trying to halt its flight. It was finally captured and released out the window to the great relief of both staff and, very probably the bat itself.

TREASURY MEN SUMMONED BY HOUSE GROUP

Rise In Income Levy Studied In Effort To Raise 12 Billions.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Treasury and congressional tax experts were summoned by the house ways and means committee today to lay the groundwork for writing a new $3,500,000,000 revenue measure intended to boost the nation's tax intake to $12,600,000,00.

Meeting behind closed doors, the committee asked for "suggestions" from John L. Sullivan, assistant treasury secretary, and from the staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation, an arm of congress. Both have been working separately and in collaboration on estimates of possible money sources.

On the other side of the capitol, meanwhile, Senator Glass D. Va.) recomended that under present circumstances "every person with any income ought to pay taxes."

Endorsing the idea of higher levels, Glass told reporters that universal taxation "in this emergency" was "imperative." It would have a salutary effect, he said, for "when people have a responsibility for providing the money, they also will have a responsibility to watch how it is spent" by congress.

As the house committee began its search for more money sources, predictions were made freely in informed capitals that the tremendous new revenue program would necessitate an increase of from 25 to 50 per cent in existing taxes, a return of many World War levies and the tapping of untouched fields.

There was talk that the present basic 4.4 per cent rate levied against individual incomes might be increased to 8.

Despite the expressed coolness of President Roosevelt to a general sales tax, discussion of such a levy persisted. Some members of congress said the approximate effect of a general sales levy might be attained—without calling it just that—by increasing the number of manufacturers' excise levies.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the ways and means committee predicted revival of at least some of the so-called "nuisance" taxes levied during the last war and repealed soon thereafter. Taxes of that period included those on railroad tickets and freight shipments, insurance policies and soft drinks.

Among existing excise taxes for which an increase was forecast in some quarters was the 6¼ cents per pack of 20 on cigarets. Others said that rates on liquor, wine and beer would be boosted but there was some opposition to this on the ground that higher priced liquor usually means more bootlegging.

The graduated surtaxes on individual income were expected to undergo upward revision and some congressional tax law writers expressed favor for a lowering of the present $4,000 income level at which these levies now apply. The surtaxes are in addition to the normal 4.4 per cent rate on all income in excess of $800 for single persons and $2,000 for those who are married.

Set Up Unit To Direct Sale of Defense Bonds

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Organization of a state division to direct the sale within Ohio of the new defense bonds and postal savings stamps will be completed this week, treasury officials said today.

Either Harry F. Busey or Frank Gentsch, collectors of interval revenue at Columbus and Cleveland respectively, will be the department's choice for Ohio administrator of the defense savings staff, it was understood.

An organization of volunteer workers will be recruited to press the sales campaign among small investors.

The sale is scheduled to open May 1 and thousands of bonds, stamps and pocket albums are being distributed to the nation's 16,000 post offices, federal reserve branches, treasury offices and other distributing agencies.

Purchasers may invest as little as 10 cents or as much as $10,000 in a single certificate.

Differences In Age Not a Handicap

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Several letters have come to me recently from young women who have fallen in love with younger men, saying that they're panic-stricken at the thought of marrying. I should like to tell all of them that a few years seniority on the part of a bride need not affect the success of a marriage. In choosing one's life partner, many points are of far greater importance than age.

Nancy T., who is 31, is on the verge of breaking her engagement to Don, who is 26. She's afraid that he looks even younger than that. They love each other devotedly and no one would ask for a husband nearer perfection than this one. So far as she knows, he hasn't a single fear or hesitation about their marriage. But she's in despair over the difference of ages. Will she be regarded by their friends as a "cradle snatcher"? Will she be able to hold him from the moment his eye lights on a woman of his own age? Will there be something a little ridiculous in allowing a husband to protect and pet a wife who has a calendar advantage over him?

My advice to her is to stop worrying, marry her fiance and cut out all birthsdays for the next five years. She can then continue life, hand-in-hand, with a husband precisely her own age.

If she is really afraid of looking older than her husband, she should take special care of her hair and complexion, follow regular exercises and wear becoming clothes. I have known several uncommonly happy marriages where this difference in ages exists, and I've known happy wives who were more than five years older than their equally contented husbands.

A woman's attitude toward a younger husband is that, of course, of a wife plus mother. It's a double devotion, and if she's sensible enough not to let her love become too possessive or too cloying, she has every chance at being happy in marriage, and every chance of being successful.

Such a marriage has, you see, a somewhat different character from the ordinary marriage, but that is no reason for its being a failure. I should merely suggest that a man should be at least 25 or 26 years of age before he marries an older woman, so that he may thoroughly understand what he's doing. It is well not to have the age difference exceed seven or eight years.

Love and understanding are indispensable to married life, and indeed to completely successful parenthood. Parity in birthdays may be overlooked.

Lipstick Favorite Beauty Aid

MME. QUI VIVE

Makeup is waning. Only the lipstick is going strong. You know it is. Get up in the morning, wash your celestial face, look in the mirror and something's all wrong. Put on the geranium lip tint and the day starts off on the right foot. Clouds may be in the sky, but that doesn't matter. You've got your portrait decorated and can look the world in the eye.

Cheeks carry blushes if nature is kind enough to place them there. The rouge pad is kicking round some place in the makeup kit, is called into action only for special occasions. Powder of pale calcimine quality, beloved by the painted lady of the past, has given way to powder so delicate that it might be taken from butterfly's wings. You fluff it on lightly. You are fussy about the color, selecting one slightly darker than your skin. No heavy patches. No slap-dash flaps of the pad on your nose. Not now. We're getting subtle if not positively slick.

Eye shadows are fainting away, probably because so few women are keen about them. Some of the lighter tints are used to impart the mysterious air when the heavy evening date is on. But the dark blues that were flaunted a few years back just aren't around. They've been supplanted by light shades of blue, pale green or mauve.

Lips like the red, red rose—I mean in their natural state—are rare and that's why the lipstick is such a sweet comfort. Though women live up to the laws of health, chase golf balls and leap around tennis courts, facial coloring is not all that it should be. Saleswomen in shops and girls who work in offices, not getting sufficient outdoor exercise to keep the blood streams galloping and muscles strong, are noticeably pale of lips. Hurried meals, getting to bed late, getting out early—that's what does it. Life's too hectic. But what can we do about it, those of us who are carrying the hod up and down the ladder, making money to pay the butcher, the baker and the electric light maker.

Youth can be flaming of lip, middle age should carry a softer deeper tone. Nothing like bright carmine for showing up wrinkles. No woman will make a mistake if she has good taste, combines reflections of the mind with reflections in the mirror. If she has heavy features she will not paint her lips in the form of a cupid's bow. If features are small and delicate she will not widen the lips, a practice that is going by the board.

If the lower lip protrudes, apply a lighter film of lip cream there than that which veneers the upper lip. Never neglect to tint the inner surface a little way.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky opened the car door as he spoke, but when from the pavement he shut it again, he went around the car, trying every door to see that it was locked. When he came back to his own place, he ran the window almost up and gave me a parting injunction.

"Lock this door now," he said, and as I obeyed him, he added a corollary.

"And keep them all locked until I return," he said. "Promise?"

"Of course, goose," I told him, but he paid no attention to the epithet.

"That's a good girl," he said. "You're carrying quite a bit of money, you know, that is, it would seem a goodly sum to some of these loafers. No use taking a chance on having your purse snatched."

It was a clumsy explanation for I really had but a negligible sum with me. But the locking of car doors when I am alone in the car on a country road, is one that I always take because of Dicky's insistence, and I would have thought nothing of it, if there had not been an intangible something in my husband's manner which made me wonder if he had some special reason for wishing the doors locked, and if that reason were connected with his belief that Carolyn's "gangster boy friend," as he had dubbed him, was the man we had just seen at the farther end of the platform.

As soon as Dicky's back was turned, I shifted my position so as to get a good look at the man we suspected of being the gangster. He had had his back to us before, but his face was partly turned toward us now, and I needed no further look. He was the man from whom the state troopers had delivered us, and I was sure that he was covertly studying our car.

The knowledge had the same effect upon me that a sudden icy shower of water over me would have had. I was chilled through with sheer fright, and when I realized that the man was in all probability waiting to take my train. I had all I could do to keep from shrieking to Dicky to get himself a ticket and accompany me to New York.

But by the time my husband came back. I had fought and shamed myself back to courage and sanity. This was my part of the job, I told myself. Dicky had his, and I must not take him away from it. I felt the little silencer pistol in my bag as I thrust my hand inside it, and was heartened by its presence, although in all the years I have carried it, I never have used it but once, and thank Heaven, with no fatal effect. But there have been several occasions when the display of it, and the knowledge of a marauder that I could and would use it, have saved my life.

Another look at the other end of the platform failed to find the gangster, and I wondered if he had noticed Dicky's going into the station, and was going to come up to the car and try to speak to me.

It was the most absurd of conjectures, and I was able to banish it by the time Dicky came back to the car. I unlocked the door on his side, and as he climbed in beside me, he looked at his watch.

"Three more minutes to train time," he said briskly. "Want to get out, or would you rather stay here until it pulls in?"

"I'll have plenty of time, won't I, when we see it coming?" I asked.

"Surest thing you know," he rejoined. "I'll take you to your seat, of course, so you won't have a thing on your alleged mind."

Final Orders.

"Will you have time to get off without risking a jump from the train while it's moving?"

"I'll have time to turn two somersaults backward," he assured me, with a chuckle, and I made no more protest. Indeed Dicky gave me no change for speech, he was so busy laying injunctions upon me.

"Don't you dare to forget," he said, "that you are to telephone me the minute you arrive safely at the Lansfield."

Argue for Parental Control

By GARRY C. MYERS Ph.D.

Is the era of youthful rebellion against parental authority at an end? Are girls and boys actually tired of following their own impulses, making their own decisions, cheerfully ignoring their parents except as sources of supply? More than a hint of this is in the air.

Striking conclusions on precisely this line were to be drawn from a recent magazine article that catalogued replies to a questionnaire sent out to large numbers of school and college students. Most of these boys and girls came out with the statement that they believed in plenty of parental supervision. For themselves, they hadn't had enough of it, and they went into particulars.

For example, they said, youthful friendships should be investigated. It's a parent's business to see with whom the children associate, and youthful sweethearting should be especially policed. But that is not all. Youngsters should be authoritatively guided in their choice of books, movies, radio programs. That is to say, censorship in the home was strongly recommended.

To read this article and consider its list of reproaches, you'd think that parents as a class had been absorbed in their own light pleasures, thinking their own selfish thoughts and had forgotten all about their responsibilities to the young.

Parents are also exposed to a sharp reprimand by the author of a current play. In this, a father, deeply intent upon his own profession of surgery, is accused by his young son and daughter of not having paid enough attention to them. Why, they say, they have had their own way in everything! It isn't natural, they complain. Why haven't they been thwarted in something? In order to express her resentment in a sufficiently dramatic way, the daughter actually leaves home.

The truth about the parent-and-child situation seems to have been lost to sight. The truth is that parents, for a considerable number of years, have really been scared to death. Do you suppose they haven't wanted to guide and advise their offspring, even to lay down a few little regulations? You may be sure they have. But they have felt, mistakenly or not, that their children had the bit in their teeth and were leagued against them.

Questions of late hours, of free use of the family car at all times of the day or night, of indiscreet love-making, of neglect of schoolwork, of lack of consideration of the family are matters in which parents have believed they ought to have some controlling voice.

But if all the other parents in a group or a town had been so browbeaten by their children that they had resigned all authority, how could a single parental couple hold out alone? So children have had their way—and it seems they are tired of it. They haven't managed their lives very well, they find. Why doesn't somebody else step in? In fact, why don't parents resume a parent's natural job?

"The Authority on Authorities"

MUST LEAD A TRUMP.

"When in doubt, lead trumps" was never meant to be taken seriously. Ordinarily it would be better to revise that into "When in doubt don't lead trumps," as usually a trump lead is the one thing a declarer would like the most, unless it be the dummy's suit when no other suit had been bid except that and the trumps. But there is one time when a trump lead is almost obligatory upon you. That is when the side has got together on a suit contract after each partner had shown one other suit. Then it looks very much like a cross-ruff, which can be broken up best by making the declarer use two trumps on a trick instead of one.

That kind of bidding developed at two tables of a duplicate game. One of the 3-Spades declarers made his contract and the other was slaughtered, it all depending on the opening lead. Where the contract was made, North chose the worst lead in the deck, the dummy's suit, leading the heart 9. The A won that. West shedding a diamond, then the diamond 4 was led to the K. The diamond 8 was ruffed by the spade 2 and the heart Q led, South ducking and letting West discard a club. He covered the heart J with the K, West ruffing.

North covered the diamond J then with his Q, dummy ruffing with the 8 and South beating it with the spade Q. Much too late now came South's spade A and K, followed by the spade 7 to the 10. All that the defenders could now get was one more trick with the club A, so the contract was made.

In the other case North opened his spade J, which won, then sent his spade 6 to the Q, followed by the A and K. The diamond 7 caused West to try a finesse or the J, North winning with the Q and returning the heart 9 to the J, K and a ruff by West. Declarer quickly raked in his diamond A, diamond K, led a club to the K, cashed the heart A and Q, then led a heart to South's 10. The club A took the last trick, setting the contract a third trick.
